U. S. Agents Seize Mahan on Coast, Campbell in Ohio

Ex-Convict Held As His Accomplice

Captured

WILLIAM MAHAN.

William Mahan, last of the principals in the Weyerhaeuser kidnaping remaining at large, and Henry Campbell, last fugitive member of the notorious Barker-Karpis gang, were arrested yesterday by Federal agents in widely separated cities.

With their bloodless capture, the slate of uncaught public enemies was wiped almost clean yesterday and the Bremer and Weyerhaeuser crimes were no longer listed on the "unsolved" records of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, J. Edgar Hoover, its chief, proclaimed in announcing the seizure of the two men.

Federal agents armed with teargas bombs and machine guns, and under the personal direction of Hoover, seized Campbell shortly before dawn yesterday in a Toledo, Ohio, apartment.

With him was a 20-year-old girl who, a year ago to the day, had married a "Bob Miller," of Cleveland, not knowing that her husband was a public enemy with a price of $2,500 "dead or alive" on his head.

Less than eight hours later, in San Francisco, Calif., another group of Federal agents, led by 29-year-old Wayne Listerman, youngest head of a Bureau of Investigation division, swooped down on Mahan while he was washing his automobile on a parking lot.

Neither Resists Officers.

Despite their reputations as "killers," neither of the two desperadoes offered any resistance, and both waived extradition rights. Mahan was flown to Tacoma, Wash., where he will go on trial for the kidnaping last May of 9-year-old George Weyerhaeuser, son of a prominent Northwest timberman, while Campbell was flown to St. Paul, where he has been indicted for the kidnaping two years ago in January of Edward George Bremer, president of the Commercial State Bank of St. Paul, Minn.

Moving swiftly, Federal agents sped from Campbell's apartment to nearby Arcadia street and arrested Sam Coker, believed to have been one of those who helped hide Campbell. A convict who has broken parole, Coker is to be returned to Oklahoma State Penitentiary at McAlester to serve out 18 years remaining of the 30-year sentence he received in 1924 for a bank robbery.

Other persons suspected of having aided Campbell are being investigated by the Department of Justice in an effort to secure an explanation of how the bandit could have lived in one city for almost 18 months and have gone undetected.

The three arrests came as a climax to a week of feverish activity on the part of Department of Justice agents that began with the capture of Alvin Karpis in New Orleans Friday night. With the Nation's three leading public enemies behind the bars, the Department of Justice found its "kidnap" slate wiped clean save for a single case—the abduction of Mrs. Berry V. Stoll by crazed Thomas H. Robinson.

To Work on New Law.

With the Department of Justice's four-year fight on the kidnap racket victorious on all fronts, Hoover announced that the bureau would now begin "to work in earnest" to enforce the recent fugitive from jus-

Republicans Require More Votes in Ohio

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, May 7.—That the Republican high command used astute political judgment in selecting Cleveland, an Ohio city, as the site of the G. O. P. nominating convention in June is shown by figures released here today by the Institute of Public Opinion. Institute polls disclose the fact that Roosevelt, who a few months ago was favored by only 47 per cent of the Buckeye voters who intend to vote either for a Democrat or a Republican has now crept up to the 50-50 mark.

New Zeppelin, Aided by Wind, Due Tomorrow

Hindenburg Is Averaging 80 M. P. H.; Threatens Normandie Record.

Copyright by the Associated Press.

Aboard the Zeppelin Hindenburg over the North Atlantic, May 7.—As this giant new German dirigible raced over the Atlantic today, Dr. Hugo Eckener, its commander, voiced the belief it might reach New York early Saturday.

"The Hindenburg is running like mad," the commander said, "averaging over 80 miles an hour, with the possibility of reaching New York early Saturday."

At 5:40 p. m. (Eastern Standard Time) the Von Hindenburg was about half-way across the Atlantic.

"The French evidently refuse permission to fly over their country," said Eckener, "because they consider that permission a trump card.

"They forget," he stated, referring to the Hindenburg, "that I have a jolly joker."

The passengers, for the first time in the history of air navigation, were treated to a piano concert by Franz Wagner, Dresden pianist. There are 108 persons aboard, of whom 52 are passengers, including 15 Americans.

Crossed in 4 Days 11 Hours.

The liner Normandie shattered all transatlantic ships' speed records by crossing from Southampton to New York in 4 days 11 hours 42 minutes, completing its trip June 3, 1935.

The Hindenburg left Friedrichshafen at 9:30 p. m., German time (3:30 p. m. Eastern standard time) Wednesday. It is expected to fly over Washington, if weather conditions permit.

U. S. to Inspect Craft.

Lakehurst, N. J., May 7 (A).—The United States Navy, luckless in its own experiments with dirigibles, will have some of its highest ranking officers on hand to inspect the German Zeppelin Hindenburg, largest craft of its type ever built, when it lands at the Naval Air Station Saturday.

Station officers said today Admiral William Standley, chief of naval operations, was expected to head the delegation coming here from Washington. Also in the group will be Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, and Rear Admiral William C. Watts, commander of the Fourth Naval District, which includes Lakehurst.

Sutton Jury Hears Killing Plot Recited

Cleary Testifies at Third Hearing in Wilson Slaying Case.

By Frederic B. Tuttle.
A Staff Correspondent.

Cumberland, Md., May 7.—A "big shot" in Washington's gambling world furnished the money for the "mistaken identity" murder of Allen B. Wilson, it was testified here today at the trial of Albert E. Sutton, gangster accused of having engineered the crime.

The witness was William Henry Cleary, Philadelphia hoodlum, who has turned State's evidence in exchange for immunity.

Cleary testified that five days before Wilson was murdered in the belief that he was Edward (Mickey) McDonald, Washington gambler, Sutton turned to him and Albert McDermott, alias John "Slim" Dunn, and said:

"I'm hard up. I hate to be bothering these people for money.

"We've used up a lot already, Slim, you'd better come along with me. You can explain."

The mysterious source of the funds which financed the attempt to kill Edward "Mickey" McDonald, colorful gaming character, was not revealed.

Apparently Sutton's lips are sealed by the underworld code which was not observed by Cleary, who has testified twice before against other members of the gang which allegedly was hired to put McDonald "on the spot."

Cleary took the stand late this afternoon. He related once more the story he has told in the trials of Ernest Wellington Myers, in Rockville, and Albert McDermott here.

The conversation of which he spoke, however, he had not revealed before. The date, he told the court as he recited his eyewitness story of the killing of Wilson in front of McDonald's home in Takoma Park, was October 18.

"Dunn and I and Sutton were in Al's apartment at Alban Towers," Cleary said.

Funds with which the alleged conspirators planned to finance the murder of McDonald were running low, Cleary stated. McDermott and Bailey had gone to New York to get a machine gun, with which to "put the heat" on Mickey.

They came back without the gun and only about $100 of the $500 Cleary says Sutton gave them to pay for the trip and the weapon.

Sutton, who is known to his friends as "Bumps," took notes industriously along with his attorneys, F. Brooke Whiting and J. Philip Roman, as Cleary talked.

Old Friends.

It was before he ever acquired the title of "Bumps" or knew what it means to face judge and jury in a first-degree murder trial, that Sutton knew Mickey McDonald, the friend of former years, whom the State contends he plotted to have murdered.

For McDonald and Sutton were youngsters together in Northwest Washington back in the days when they wore knee trousers and played mumbly peg in the spring.

When Cleary finished his oft-repeated story, he was submitted to a fiery cross-examination by Whiting.

"You are in this case as a State's witness to save your own neck, aren't you, Cleary?" asked Whiting.

"Well," hesitated the big gangster in a subdued voice, "I wouldn't put it that way."

"You have been promised immunity. So you are in this case to escape prosecution for your part in the murder of Wilson."

"I'm here just because I thought someone would beat me to it," answered Cleary.

"I knew the case was perfect. I followed that first law of nature, I guess—self-preservation."

Playing a trump he has held in his legal hand since before the Myers trial last month, State's Attorney James H. Pugh, who hopes to send Sutton to the gallows, brought to the stand earlier in the day Dewey Jenkins, diminutive "small shot" gambler and petty racketeer.

Jenkins had been indicted for conspiracy to murder McDonald, but, according to his signed confession, he left the plot before it matured.

Talking in the wary parlance of the underworld, the little Baltimore

Sets Solo Record

AMY MOLLISON.

By the Associated Press.

Capetown, Union of South Africa, May 7.—Mrs. Amy Johnson Mollison shattered the male-held record for a solo flight from England to Capetown today and then expressed disappointment that it was not by a bigger margin.

The veteran British airwoman landed here at 2:31 p. m., Greenwich mean time (9:31 a. m., Eastern standard time), 3 days 6 hours 26 minutes after taking off from Gravesend, England.

She disclosed that she slept only six hours on the 6,700-mile flight.

The feat broke by 11 hours 12 minutes the record set in February by Flight Lieut. Tommy Rose.

"I am disappointed at not breaking the record by a bigger margin," Mrs. Mollison said. "Owing to the fact that my schedule was upset at Oran and because of the bad airdromes on the west coast, I found it impossible to get back to it. My machine is potentially capable of flying 2,000 miles without a stop."

She had a considerable delay at Oran, Algeria, awaiting a weather report before taking off for Pointe Noire, French Africa. Then she had to wait several hours more to avoid landing at Pointe Noire in the dark.

News of her achievement was conveyed immediately to King Edward, while Secretary of Air Viscount Swinton of Great Britain telegraphed his congratulations.

Bandits Hold Up, Rob 3 Men Here

Three men were held up and robbed early yesterday by armed bandits.

William J. Corcoran, of 812 Sixth street northeast, reported to police two men and a woman robbed him of $11 in bills and a gold watch while he was walking in Pension Park northwest. His assailants fled in an automobile, Corcoran said.

Norval E. Garner, 57, of 1339 Fifteenth street northwest, was held up at the point of a pistol by a white man and a Negro while he was walking in the rear of the White House.

Garner said the colored man held the gue and that $42 in bills and a gold watch was taken from his pockets by the white men.

Martin F. Bartscheck, 45, of 506 Eighth street southwest, a taxicab driver, reported he was robbed of $7 by two Negroes who hired him at Seventh and E streets southwest and asked to be driven to Nineteenth and M streets northwest. One of the men held a gun to his neck, Bartscheck told police.

Redmond Gets Three-Year Term

Victor H. Redmond, 42, of Washington, who received unwarranted publicity last November in connection with the Loring murder case, was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary yesterday for assault and battery on a 9-year-old Mount Rainier girl. An attempted criminal assault charge was dropped.

He was sentenced by Judge Joseph C. Mattingly, of the Prince Georges County Circuit Court after he pleaded guilty. He had been held in the Upper Marlboro Jail since his arrest.

Redmond, manager of a restaurant on Georgia avenue, was taken into custody after he attacked the girl on the streets of Mount Rainier, not far from the home of Mrs. Frances Loring, mother of the slain Corinna Loring.

The proximity of the attack to the Loring home gave rise to the belief that the man was implicated in the killing of the 27-year-old public stenographer. This was later discounted by Lieut. Joseph Itzel, Baltimore police investigator.

Landon Calls New Deal Bar To Recovery

Governor Will 'Accept Verdict of People' on Liquor.

Kansan Plans to Wage Fighting Campaign If Nominated.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., May 7.—Gov. Alf M. Landon, in a radio interview, tonight assailed the New Deal for "heedless retarding of recovery," and in his first national expression on the liquor question "accepted the verdict of the people" in returning control to the individual States.

Landon indicated he would wage a "fighting campaign" if nominated for the Presidency by the Republican National Convention in June, and asserted:

"The real issue before the American people today is not whether you are better off now than you were in 1933.

"The real question and issue is this: Have we made as much progress in coming out of this depression as you have a reasonable right to expect?"

The interview, broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System, was conducted by H. V. Kaltenborn, radio commentator, in the study of the executive residence.

Asked whether he would make a "real fighting campaign" should he be nominated, Gov. Landon said:

"Well, you can never tell how a hoss will work until you hitch him up. The returns of the last two Kansas elections might answer that question. I don't think anyone ever considered our political campaigns in Kansas as pink tea affairs."

Says People Are Betrayed.

"I believe that in the business of government, good intentions are not enough," Landon said. "Our high national ideals, the call for social justice, our goal of maximum individual opportunity for every man, woman and child in the land are all being betrayed by wasteful, slipshod, incompetent, happy-go-lucky administration.

"The American people are being given half a loaf and charged for a full loaf."

Saying "a lot of people in so-called wet States, knowing that you come from dry Kansas, are anxious about the way you stand on prohibition," Kaltenborn asked, "Just what is your attitude?"

Landon replied, "The people rendered an overwhelming verdict that the question should be returned to the various States for such decision as their citizenry wished. I accept that verdict.

Liquor Up to States.

"And I believe that it is up to each State to determine its own policy on liquor, subject, of course, to section two of the twenty-first amendment, under which shipments into dry States are forbidden."

Landon attacked the "present relief setup" as marked by "wretched party politics."

Of Government regulation of business, he said:

"There should be regulation, wherever regulation keeps opportunity open and protects, not hampers, the people as a whole in the exercise of their rights. We've got to attack the evils of monopoly frankly and resolutely."

Freighter Is Sunk; Another Rammed

The Dutch steamer Alphard sank after colliding with the Hamburg-American liner New York. Her crew of 27 was rescued.

A few minutes later the North German Lloyd liner Columbus collided with the Italian freighter Antonietta Lauro. Both were damaged but proceeded under their own power.

Hundreds of passengers aboard the New York watched the Alphard's 27 seamen taken aboard. The Alphard was stove in and sank within a few minutes. The New York's bow was damaged, but she reported that she was not in danger.

Deaf Mute Wins Back Permit; Convinces Board He Can Drive

A lesson in traffic safety—presented without words—won Thomas J. Looney, 30, a deaf mute, restoration of his driving privileges yesterday.

Looney appeared before the Board of Review and Revocation of Operators' Permits to plead for renewal of his permit, suspended several months ago after a speeding conviction.

Aided by the sign language—interpreted through Policeman H. H. Hoke, Traffic Division—Looney, a printer, convinced members of the board he was capable of driving an automobile in spite of his affliction. He was the first deaf mute ever to appear before the board and one of the few ever arrested for a traffic violation in Washington.

"We would have no traffic problem," said Assistant Corporation Counsel Raymond Sparks, "if every motorist in the District knew the regulations as well as Looney."

Policeman Hoke, official sign language expert of the Police Department, sat beside Looney and interpreted his statements to the board. Looney was accused of speeding at 50 miles an hour on upper Sixteenth street northwest.

In silent testimony, he told the board that his speedometer was broken and he was not aware of the offense.

Sparks, at first not convinced of the man's ability to drive a car safely, asked what he did in case of an emergency—approaching fire engines or ambulances.

"I always watch my rear mirror and slow down at intersections," responded Looney, with gestures to Policeman Hoke. "I can always tell when fire apparatus is approaching by watching other cars. When they slow down and pull to the curb, I do the same."

Connally Leads Bolt Of Senate Democrats Against New Tax Bill

Bloc Seeking Relief Fund Split Voted Down in House Caucus

Motion to Amend Bill, Allot PWA Moneys Is Beaten, 70 to 53.

By Felix Bruner.

The Administration machine in the House at a caucus last night rolled over the plan of a group of insurgent Democrats to earmark a part of the $1,425,000,000 relief fund for the Public Works Administration and crushed it probably far beyond repair.

In the caucus, called by a group of Democrats headed by Representative Beiter (Democrat), New York, a motion to amend the bill by earmarking $700,000,000 for the Ickes organization was voted down, 70 to 53. The affirmative vote represented less than half the number of Democrats Beiter claimed had signed a petition to amend the bill.

The caucus was held after the battle over relief had started in the House with debate upon a $2,364,229,712 deficiency bill, containing the relief appropriation, nearly all of which is to be spent by Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator.

As the last piece of "must" legislation started on the way to almost certain enactment, it was subjected to attacks by Republicans, who insist that administration of relief must, at least in some measure, be returned to the States.

Beiter, in commenting on the caucus action, said that "steam roller methods made votes for our side."

Morgenthau Letter Replies to G.O.May

Treasury Estimate Is Asked on Texan's Substitute Proposal.

By Robert C. Albright.

A definitely hostile trend against the Administration's proposed undistributed corporate earnings tax developed yesterday among conservative Democrats on the Senate Finance Committee, as a new barrage of factual evidence against the revolutionary plan was laid down by large and small business spokesmen.

Whether their votes will be sufficient to overturn completely the Administration proposals, and substitute one of several more moderate plans now crystalizing, may depend on whether Republican committee members co-operate in the conservative movement, or take a flat stand against any additional taxes.

Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, led the latest bolt against the Administration's own program yesterday, with a tentative alternative proposal calling for a flat 12½ per cent corporation tax, and an additional 12½ per cent surtax, applied against undistributed earnings.

Consider Substitutes.

Connally sought estimates from Treasury experts on how much his proposal will yield in revenue. If it falls far short of the $620,000,000 asked by the President, the Texan may hike his figures somewhat. At least two other conservative Democratic members of the committee are known to be considering other substitute tax proposals.

As the sudden shift in committee sentiment became known, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., made public a letter to Chairman Pat Harrison, admitting a "possible ambiguity" in part of his testimony before the group, but insisting it in no way affected the Treasury's estimate that the pending corporate tax proposal will raise $623,000,000 in additional revenue.

Replies to G. O. May.

His statement came in rebuttal of testimony by George O. May, war-time Treasury adviser and senior partner of the New York accounting firm of Price, Waterhouse & Co., that the Secretary had made "an obvious and serious misstatement of fact" upon an important tax question.

Morgenthau had told the committee that "under the present law more than $4,500,000,000 of corporation income in the calendar year 1936 will be withheld from stockholders and that if this income were fully distributed to the individual owners of the stock represented in these corporations, the resultant yield in additional individual income taxes would be about $1,300,000,000."

May had cited Commissioner of Internal Revenue Guy T. Helvering's own testimony as evidence of the fact that repeal of the existing law is prerequisite to the existence of the $4,500,000,000. May charged the Treasury had underestimated the revenue yield if the law is unchanged, and overestimated the revenue increase under the new plan.

Defends Testimony.

Defending his own testimony, Morgenthau in his letter to Harrison yesterday said:

"I can see that the phrase 'withheld from stockholders' was possibly open to misunderstanding, inasmuch as the figure $1,300,000,000 was arrived at after we had deducted from the $4,500,000,000 an amount equal to the existing corporation taxes.

"What I have just said about a possible ambiguity in the use of this term relates to one of my arguments on the merits of the proposed corporate tax, not at all to my statement of the Treasury's estimate of what this tax would yield. That estimate is $623,000,000 additional revenue."

The impressive and authoritative array of testimony against the bill appeared the largest single factor in influencing the new committee trend in opposition to the President's proposed tax measure. It

Rover, Colladay Elected by Rival G.O.P. Factions

Landon Wins Support of Smaller Group at Split Meetings.

By Edward F. Folliard.

Local Republicans, their organization split wide open, last night in effect submitted their quarrel to the Republican National Convention to be held in Cleveland next month.

Two factions met in the headquarters of the National Capital Republican Club, Sixteenth street and Scott Circle, and each acted as if the other didn't exist.

The larger of the two elected Leo A. Rover, former District Attorney here, as Republican National Committeeman.

The other faction chose Edward F. Colladay, who has been national committeeman for the District for 19 years.

Both factions elected Mrs. Virginia White Speel for another four-year term as Republican national committeewoman. Her continuance in office was the only thing on which they agreed.

Own Slate for Each.

Each elected its own slate of three delegates and alternates, the Rover group allowing their theirs to go to Cleveland uninstructed and the Colladay group instructing theirs for Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas.

The delegates elected by the Rover group were Joshua Evans, jr., M. Pearl McCall, and Dr. C. Herbert Marshall, Negro. Their alternates will be Paul Shorb, Mrs. Edmund H. Parry, jr., and West A. Hamilton, Negro.

In sending them to Cleveland uninstructed, Rover said, the Republican State Committee was following a custom of long-standing in the District.

The delegates elected by the Colladay group were James C. Wilkes, Mrs. Mildred Reeves and Francis Wells, Negro. Their alternates will be Charles H. Galliher, Mrs. Cooper Rhodes and J. Franklin Wilson, Negro.

22 The Colladay group, meeting on the second floor of the Scott Circle mansion, while the Rover-Evans group was holding forth on the first, adopted a resolution indorsing oGv.

Slum Projects Here Imperiled By Funds Slash

House Unit Cuts $300,000 From Estimate of Budget Bureau.

By James D. Secrest.

The Alley Dwelling Authority will be forced to discontinue its long-range program of eliminating Washington's alley slums on July 1 unless $300,000 slashed from Budget Bureau deficiency estimates by the House Appropriations Committee is restored.

Disclosure of the elimination of funds to permit the Alley Dwelling Authority to carry on its conversion of dirty back streets into neat garages or commercial shops came yesterday as the deficiency bill was reported to the House.

The measure carried appropriations for the District government, aggregating $88,688.74, a reduction of $84,278.03 under Budget Bureau recommendations.

It also included $200,000 for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to continue its purchases of park land under the Capper-Cramton act and authorized the commission to utilize an unexpended balance of $800,000 appropriated in the 1935 and 1936 acts.

$5,500,000 Available.

A total of $5,550,000 was made available for continuation of construction of Federal buildings in the District of Columbia, and an item of $2,041,890 was recommended for salaries and general expenses of public buildings and grounds in the National Capital.

The local construction appropriations include $3,350,000 for completion of projects under the program authorized by the 1926 act, $2,000,000 for additional building for the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and $200,000 for continuation of the Government Printing office annex.

Two Federal building projects for the District were eliminated by the committee. One of these was $5,000,000 to begin construction of a new War Department Building, while the other was an authorization of $8,600,000 for a new General Accounting Office.

Demolition Opposed.

The committee pointed out that further study is necessary before the Government builds a new War Department home or any other structures.

Harvard Editors Fly Red Flag On U. S. Court as 'Prophecy'

The red flag of Soviet Russia flown from the flagstaff of the United States Supreme Court building was a student stunt heralding an editorial prophecy in an issue of the Lampoon, Harvard College comic monthly, it developed last night.

Editors of the Lampoon disclosed the publicity stunt at Cambridge, a United Press copyrighted dispatch said, "after satisfying themselves that university authorities would not deal with them too harshly."

The editorial which the flying of the flag was meant to fulfill stated, in part:

"One morning we are liable to wake up and find the red flag of Moscow waving over the Supreme Court."

Firemen were called, but when their ladder was found too short, a blow torch was attached to a pole, pushed up the ladder by a sturdy fireman and soon the flag fell, a burning mass.

Youth Admits Hoax.

Boston, May 7 (A).—State police made short work today of the mystery of the second package of a suspicious nature to be mailed this week to Gov. James M. Curley.

State Detective Capt. John F. Stokes announced solution of the second case today after talking with George Davis, 19-year-old Harvard freshman, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Earlier in the day postal workers intercepted a package addressed to the Governor, which contained nothing but an alarm clock and a mixture of peppermint candy. A card within was inscribed with these words:

"Your time has come, you brave man."

4 Polish Pilots Killed In Mid-Air Collision

Warsaw, May 7 (U.P.).—Four pilots were killed and one was seriously injured tonight when three military planes collided in formation flight over Skoki Airdrome, near Poznan.

One plane crashed after the collision and its three occupants were killed instantly.

The pilot of the second plane was killed when his parachute failed to open. Another flier in the second plane remained in the cockpit and was gravely injured when it crashed.

The pilot and co-pilot of the third plane escaped uninjured although their plane was badly damaged.

Durable Goods Industries Note Decided Upturn

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that a substantial upturn in the heavy goods industries was leading the way in helping American business to move "forward over a broad front this spring."

The heavy industries have been termed by many the key to recovery. In normal times they employ far more workers than any other branch of industry.

"Expansion has been pronounced in the durable goods industries," the department said, "with construction activity making noteworthy progress."

Again, it reported:

"One of the most significant aspects of the improvement in industrial activity this spring has been the extent of the rise in steel ingot production, the bell-wether of the durable goods industries.

"In the latter part of April ingot production was in excess of 70 per cent of rated capacity, or the equivalent of about 80 per cent of the daily capacity in use in 1929. The indicated daily rate of output for April is the highest since the spring of 1930.

"Of particular importance with reference to the current rise is the fact that the automobile industry is not directly responsible for the increase in steel output in comparison with that of a year ago.

"March production of cars was slightly less than that of March, 1935. April production of cars will probably equal the corresponding total a year ago, but the output of steel ingots will be 40 per cent or more, above the April, 1935, output."

Allowing for stocking of raw steel as the possible partial cause of the upturn in the steel industry, the department said the present rate of production "would appear to bear out other evidences of a marked improvement in the demand for steel from the machinery, agricultural implement, railroad equipment, structural steel and other heavy industries."

Lacking production figures in the lines enumerated, the department cited pay-roll data "as evidence of improvement, since wage rates in general have been relatively stable during the past year."

Pay rolls in the machinery group (exclusive of transportation equipment), it said, had advanced 23 per cent in 12 months, with even larger increases for some individual industries included. A jump of 50 per cent in the agriculture implement industry and of 46 per cent in the machine tool industry were cited in this connection.

Roosevelt Vetoes Seven Minor Bills

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday vetoed seven bills—all of a minor nature—bringing to 170 the number he has disapproved since taking office.

In the first session of the Seventy-third Congress, he vetoed none, but in the second session he vetoed 19 directly and let 54 others die through pocket vetoes. A bill is pocket vetoed when the President fails to sign it within 10 days after adjournment of Congress.

In the first session of the Seventy-fourth Congress there were 35 straight vetoes and 28 pocket vetoes. Thus far this session he has vetoed outright 34 measures, including prepayment of the soldiers' bonus. Congress repassed the bonus over his veto.

Busy as he was writing the veto messages yesterday, Mr. Roosevelt also found time to approve 48 bills, all of them of minor nature.

Selassie Due to Reach Haifa, Palestine, Today

Haifa, Palestine, May 7 (AP).—Emperor Haile Selassie, a voluntary exile from his conquered country, will arrive here tomorrow aboard the British cruiser Enterprise.

A royal salute will be fired when he steps ashore. The Negus will remain under the protection of the British government until a special train reaches Jerusalem, it is understood, and then he becomes a private individual so far as the British are concerned.

For this reason, no one will be permitted to approach him for any purpose in Haifa, but he will be free to see whom he wishes in Jerusalem. It was understood the Emperor and his family would stay in a leading hotel in Jerusalem.

1.5 Billion Relief Bill Due to Pass Substantially Unaltered; Ready-Made Political Issue.

By Franklyn Waltman

DESPITE forceful and telling arguments to the contrary, the opinion is widespread that the Democratic majorities in House and Senate will jam through to final passage the Administration $1,500,000,000 relief bill in substantially the form in which it was proposed.

WALTMAN

Perhaps it is asking too much to contend that the Roosevelt Administration, on the eve of an election, should confess that its relief program has been a failure and to relinquish its distribution of the relief sums to the State authorities.

But adoption of the course now being urged by the Republicans on Capitol Hill and by some Democrats might well be the smartest politics which the New Deal strategists could play. There is no doubt that the Roosevelt Adminsitration is vulnerable on the relief issue—and the Republican nominee will be quick to take advantage of that opening.

His case is ready made for him—and it is so clear that it can not be misunderstood by the humblest voter nor laughed off by the best New Deal wisecracker. The fact stands out that despite some increase in employment and goodly recovery—of which the New Dealers boast—relief for the unemployed today is as costly as it was three years ago.

And the fact likewise stands out that approximately 10,000,000 persons willing to work are without jobs in this country—and the New Deal is not making any noticeable progress in solving that problem. This phase of the situation is completely overlooked by the Democratic spokesmen when they boast of economic recovery under the New Deal. They seek to draw attention to corporation earnings, stock-market prices and dividends declared, as published on the financial pages, in order to distract attention from the front pages which tell of the unemployed.

In the beginning of the New Deal, huge sums were asked for relief, on the plea that direct frontal attacks on the problem would quickly solve it—that such expenditures described as purely emergency in character, would not be recurrent charges on the Treasury. But that promise has not materialized, and the pretense that the appropriation now asked will be the last has not even been suggested.

The sums appropriated for relief and recovery since the New Deal started are truly amazing when viewed in the aggregate. Taking the latest available Daily Statement of the Treasury as the source, it is found that the staggering sum of $17,777,505,735, has been made available by Congress for relief and recovery agencies and that, to date, all but $5,126,559,686 has been expended.

These totals include sums appropriated for the use of recovery credit agencies, such as the RFC and for the overhead expenses of the HOLC and FHA. But the major portion of this total has been used, directly or indirectly, either to stimulate employment or to relieve the destitution and suffering of the jobless.

Leaving out of the computations the RFC—which has loaned money to bolster financial institutions and railroads, as well as for unemployment relief—we find that Congress has appropriated since the New Deal started $11,572,000,000 for relief and recovery, but the total is more than that, for the RFC has advanced more than $1,000,000,000 for relief.

First came the 1933 PWA program calling for a total of $3,235,935,000; then the emergency appropriation act of June 19, 1934, providing $1,363,005,000; then the emergency relief appropriation act of 1935, providing $4,665,221,643, while appropriations totaling $2,308,079,808 for specific projects were enacted in addition to three major so-called "emergency" acts.

With these sums various devices were tried. First was the effort at heavy public works—the pump-priming stage—but that was found to be a slow way of spending money. The CWA was improvised on the spur of the movement to get the relief money out, and some $826,000,000 was disbursed in that manner.

Meanwhile, the now much-abused "dole" had its day in the sun through the FERA, and almost $3,000,000,000 was disbursed to the needy through direct grants and through grants to the States. But the dole was held to be demoralizing and degrading, and it was abandoned and now we have the WPA, which since last July 1 has cost $942,682,000.

Although the President intends to continue the WPA, it is obvious that all these approaches to handling the relief problem have failed—failed because the problem remains with us and promises to be as costly as in years when the economic condition of the country was far worse than it is now.

There remains the commonsense proposal to return the relief problem to the State governments, with the Federal Treasury giving whatever financial assistance is necessary, subject to minimum standards. This is not a partisan Republican proposal, for it has been made by Howard Bruce, the Maryland Democratic national committeeman who has a thorough knowledge of the practicalities of the relief situation. Nor is it made for partisan advantage, for most of the State governments today are in the hands of Democrats.

Certainly none will argue the best-qualified and best-intentioned administrators in Washington can do a better job of handling the relief problem in Maryland or Georgia or Colorado than similar local officials.

But, the smug answer is made—sometimes inferred—that the State authorities cannot be trusted—they would either put incompetent administrators in charge of the funds or they would play politics with the money. This is no answer whatever, for the State officials have motives just as noble as anyone in Washington. Moreover, since their own government would be required to make some contribution to the cost of relief, a watchful and near-by citizenry would quickly check any misuse of the funds—a safeguard lacking today.

Can the real explanation for the Administration's rejection of these proposals be that it wishes to keep its hands on the money in order that those on relief, for political purposes, can be made to understand exactly the source of the help they are getting? We wonder!

$572,466,844 Army Fund Bill Passes Senate

Record Peace Measure Is Sent to White House; Navy Program Up.

Working with speed, the Senate yesterday accepted minor House changes in the $572,466,844 War Department appropriation—a record for peace time—and sent it to the White House for the President's signature.

Then, amidst the opposition and heckling of Chairman Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, and a bloc of anti-big Navy Senators, the Senate took under consideration the $529,125,806 Navy appropriation bill, itself setting a peace-time cost record.

The War Department bill provides for increasing the Army to the full enlisted strength of 165,000, and carries funds for 565 more airplanes and $8,500,000 for seacoast defense. Of the total, $383,104,859 is for purely military purposes and the balance is for such projects as rivers and harbors.

The Navy bill contains authorization for two new battleships, provided any other treaty power starts building. It provides for 18 smaller ships, for 333 airplanes, and for increasing the Navy personnel to 100,000.

Nye Criticizes Bill.

Senator Nye bitterly criticized the bill. He was joined by Senators Norris (Republican), of Nebraska; Bone (Democrat), of Washington; King (Democrat), of Utah; Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, and Capper (Republican), of Kansas.

The bloc forced an agreement on Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, who was in charge of the bill, and on Majority Leader Robinson, not to bring a vote on the measure until today, when absent opposition Senators will have returned to the Capital.

Senator Nye directed his criticism at the increasing cost of the Navy, and at the recent London naval disarmament conference. He declared he had "serious doubt if a sincere effort was made at London, to accomplish peace."

He asserted that American delegates went to the conference with no thought of a Navy reduction, and he quoted Admiral William H. Standley as saying on his return to New York that, "We didn't lose a damn thing."

"That treaty ought to be called the Swiss cheese treaty," he said of the London three-power agreement, "so full of holes is this last effort to control these ventures."

Senator Norris alluded to the recent victory of the Italian in Ethiopia and asked "if preparations for war like this" might not lead to attacks by this country on other nations.

"Great Victory for Italy."

"It was a great victory for Italy," he said. "It was an ignominious defeat for Ethiopia. Mussolini has given an exhibition of how it is possible to destroy an armed people and to murder more babies than ever before in the history of the world in the same length of time."

"Who would attack us?" Senator Nye asked, asserting the appropriation must be for offense and not defense. He quoted a remark made by Abraham Lincoln, in which Lincoln said not the entire resources of Europe, Asia and Africa combined would be able to prevail against the United States.

"This bill," Nye said, "plans for transporting American youths to other lands to defnd us from attack. We are not contemplating national defense. No nation is less susceptible to attack than the United States. We are leading the armament race. Such races are always followed by war."

Senator Bone declared that he had come to discount the pleas of the Navy Department for "adequate defense" because of the department's "peculiar opposition" to Government-owned navy yards.

"They oppose every effort to improve the Government's navy yards—our first line of naval defense—yet they are always asking for more money for private shipbuilders," Bone said. "The influences working in the Navy Department are difficult to explain," he declared.

No Big Group Protests.

Senator Pope (Democrat), of Idaho, joined Bone in inquiring of Chairman Nye if the United States Chamber of Commerce or the National Economy League had protested against the expenditures. Nye said he had been unable to find any objection from these or from the American Liberty League.

Campbell Held Unique Karpis Gang Member

Never Killed a Man, So Far as Records of Police Indicate.

Harry Campbell, arrested yesterday in Toledo, was a very unusual member of the Karpis-Barker gang. He was unusual because, so far as police know, he never killed a man.

Campbell was late in joining the gang, which probably accounts for the absence of blood on his hands. He enrolled under the leadership of the villainous Kate ("Ma") Barker and Alvin Karpis just in time to play a role in the $200,000 Bremer kidnaping in St. Paul, Minn., in January, 1934. It was he and Karpis who actually "snatched" Bremer, investigators say.

Prior to that he had been pretty much what the underworld calls a "punk," with a few robberies on his record.

In Florida With Karpis.

Not until January 20, 1935, did he achieve widespread notoriety. He and Alvin Karpis, with their women, had been in Florida when "Ma" Barker and her son, Freddie, were killed in a spectacular gun battle with Federal agents. Campbell and Karpis, traveling in a stolen automobile, went to Atlantic City, N. J.

The Florida police, not knowing who had the car, broadcast the license number to police in other cities. Atlantic City police spotted the car and arrested the men who had been traveling in it. They found them in a hotel, but were ill prepared for what happened.

Karpis and Campbell confronted the police with machine guns, and then, under a furious fire, made their escape in another stolen car, leaving their women behind them.

Two Girls Sentenced.

Karpis' girl, Delores Delaney, soon was to become a mother. She and Campbell's companion, Wynona Burdette, a radio crooner, were taken to Miami, Fla., where they were sentenced to five years on a detention farm for harboring the two criminals.

Campbell was born 36 years ago in McClintocville, Pa. His police record began when, at the age of 20, he was arrested in Tulsa, Okla., and fined $19.

He was arrested in Lincoln County, Okla., a year later on a bank robbery charge, but after six months was discharged on a court order for trial. What happened afterward in that case is not clear in the records.

He was arrested for burglary in Tulsa in 1932, but "jumped" his bond. He remained outside of the bars until yesterday.

Federal Men

From the smiling, unruffled manner with which Hoover received newspapermen in his office yesterday, no one would have believed that he had been working on the case for almost 24 hours. The night before, he cut short his supper to fly to Toledo to be in at the "kill" and, after seeing Campbell safely stowed away on a plane to St. Paul, flew back to Washington.

As Hoover described the capture of Campbell it seemed a parallel to the raid in New Orleans in which Karpis was seized.

Campbell's apartment was on the second floor of a two-story building in Monroe street. A delicatessen and bar occupied the first floor and there was a porch entrance in the rear. Federal agents surrounded the building and then a selected group went up the narrow stairs and broke into the room.

Reached for Pistol.

Campbell, who was awakened from his sleep, had sufficient time to reach the .45 automatic pistol that was discovered later by the agents, hidden under the pillows of the sofa. Apparently, however, he thought better of it and did not choose to fight.

Federal agents, who recalled that it was Campbell who "came out shooting" in Atlantic City when he and Karpis were surprised by local police the day after the killing of "Ma" and Fred Barker in Florida, were surprised that Campbell did not put up a battle.

Like Karpis, Campbell had had his fingertips "butchered" to alter his tell-tale prints. At first he denied his identity, pointing to his wife in bed and to their framed marriage certificate made to a Mr. and Mrs. Robert Miller, in Bowling Green, Ohio, and dated May 7, 1935—just a year ago.

Under questioning, Campbell admitted his identity, and said he had been living at the apartment for almost five months and had been in and out of Cleveland for the last 18 months. In his possession was found $2,900 which the agents were checking last night in an effort to identify as part of the $200,000 paid as ransom for Bremer.

Mahan was found to have a considerable portion of the $200,000 Weyerhaeuser ransom money. In a zipper bag in his car was more than $30,000, and on his person an additional $7,300. In his possession also was found some inks and dies which had been used to change the serial numbers on the bills.

It was partly through these ransom bills, Hoover revealed, that Mahan was found. Ever since the kidnaping bills have been turning up infrequently. Several weeks ago Department of Justice agents traced considerable batches of the ransom money to Los Angeles and then to San Francisco.

Asked whether Karpis supplied the tip that led the agents to the whereabouts of Campbell, Hoover refused to comment, save to state that "no one will receive the reward offered as no one furnished us with the information that led to the arrest."

Campbell's capture, Hoover made clear, had been effected without "any information or the co-operation of postal inspectors."

Murdock Explains Friction.

From Kildroy Murdock, chief inspector of the Postoffice Department, it was learned that postal inspectors have been searching for Karpis and Campbell in connection with the Garrettsville, Ohio, mail train robbery. Murdoch said his department has tried to co-operate in every way with the Department of Justice and that any friction that might have arisen could be explained as just "two persons working on the same case from different angles failing to get along."

Rumors have been current for some time that Department of Justice men and postal inspectors were working at odds in the case.

First news of Campbell's capture came from Toledo, Ohio, where the arrest was made, but the story of Mahan's arrest was broken by Hoover in his office here in most nonchalant fashion.

Hoover had been talking with newspapermen for about 15 minutes about the Campbell case and the reporters were about to leave, when one asked:

"When are you going to catch Mahan?"

"That reminds me—we arrested him in San Francisco at 12:30 today," replied the G-man chief.

Hoover revealed that the net had been tightening around both Campbell and Mahan for several days, but that he himself was surprised at the swiftness with which Mahan was found.

The kidnaper had begun to wash his car, parked in the rear of the postoffice and almost in the backyard of the San Francisco Bureau of Investigation offices, when he was seized. Federal agents had watched him emerge from the postoffice only a few minutes before and had surrounded the block, cutting off all possible means of escape.

So suddenly did the agents appear that Mahan had no chance to draw the pistol he carried. Like Campbell he at first denied his identity, but on questioning admitted who he was.

Asked whether Mahan had confessed, Hoover replied, "He doesn't have to. We have enough on him now not to have any trouble convicting him."

Little George Weyerhaeuser was on his way home for lunch from school when he was seized and hustled into an automobile. Seven days later, after his father had paid the $200,000 ransom as the kidnapers instructed, the boy was released and found his own way to the home of a farmer.

The first break in the case came within a month with the arrest of Margaret Thulin Waley in Salt Lake City, while attempting to pass off some of the ransom bills. Her husband, Harmon Metz Waley was also arrested. Both confessed, were duly convicted and sent to prison.

In their confessions the Waleys said the kidnaping was engineered principally by William Dainard, alias William Mahan, previously identified as one of the kidnapers. For ten months Justice men and local enforcement officers followed the trail of the ransom money through every Western state.

Two factors that aided justice agents in trailing Waley, Hoover revealed, were that the kidnaper stayed on the West Coast and his known fondness for living in caves and shacks in out-of-the-way mountain places. The original Waley "hideout" in which a cache of more than $90,000 of the ransom money was found, was in historic Immigration Canyon, near Salt Lake City.

"Finishes Karpis Gang."

The capture of Campbell "finishes the Barker-Karpis gang," Hoover declared.

Although Dr. Joseph P. Moran, the plastic surgeon who undertook to alter the facial features and fingertips of different members of the Barker-Karpis gang, has not been found, Hoover said he believed the doctor's body lay at the bottom of Lake Erie.

"Reliable underworld reports have it that the Doc has gone to the fishes," he said. "The doctor knew too much and I have no doubt that one of the gang killed him."

Despite the fact that Karpis had his facial features altered, Campbell, Hoover said, told him that he had refused to allow the physician to tamper with his face. He had permitted him only to attempt to alter the lines on his fingerprints.

Campbell's eyes were bloodshot and he seemed to have spent the night drinking when the Federal agents burst into his quarters, Hoover said.

"When I called him a rat," Hoover remarked, "he got very sore and replied:

"Don't call me a rat. (Mrs. Anna Sage (the notorious woman in red who betrayed John Dillinger) was a rat, but I'm not."

Calls Mrs. Sage Rat.

Despite that Campbell did not fight back, Hoover revealed the gangster retained something of his wise-cracking nature while being questioned by Government agents.

"When I asked him why he didn't let us know where he was and save us the trouble of going after him," Hoover said, "Campbell replied 'I figured I'd be like Mae West, maybe you'd come up and see me sometime and then I would be ready for you.'"

The name of the girl Campbell was with was being withheld, Hoover explained, as he believed she was telling the truth when she said she did not know the true identity of her husband. He said that after being questioned in Cleveland, she would be released, as was the red-haired girl found with Karpis in New Orleans.

Coker, whom Hoover described as "one of our parole boys," could be tried on a charge of harboring a criminal, Hoover said. However, the penalty for such a charge would be considerably less than the 18 years awaiting him in the State Oklahoma penitentiary.

It was at this penitentiary that Coker met Doc Barker.

Obviously jubilant at the day's work, Hoover pointed out that although the kidnap racket was virtually smashed there still is "plenty for the bureau to do."

"Kidnaping, of course, will always continue to some extent," he said, "and we'll tackle each case as it comes up. However this business of tracking down kidnapers has taken so much of our time that we haven't been able to investigate a number of other fields.

"There is the field of fugitives from justice who cross from one State to another. We are going to start in on that in earnest soon. Then there are the jewel and bond rackets that must be broken up."

Mahan Classed As Enemy No. 1 Only Six Days

Listed as 'Killer' Type by Federal Agents, He Has Long Record.

In "Anything Goes," the satirical comedy shown here several months ago, one of the underworld characters, a moon-faced individual billed as "Public Enemy No. 31," had one overpowering ambition. He wanted to move up the gangland ladder—to become "Public Enemy No. 1." His ludicrous efforts to rise provided most of the plot and most of the laughter.

If William Mahan, 33, scar-faced kidnaper who was captured yesterday in San Francisco, ever saw that play, he is now in a position to philosophize. And the burden of his philosophizing would be that the reign of a Public Enemy No. 1 is indeed a brief one.

Mahan, whose true name is William Dainard, had enjoyed the dubious distinction exactly six days.

Moved to Top.

He moved to the top of the "wanted" list of the Federal Bureau of Investigation a week ago today, when J. Edgar Hoover and his men arrested the murderous Alvin Karpis in New Orleans without firing a shot.

Into the uncomfortable niche vacated by Karpis and Mahan now moves Thomas Henry Robinson, jr., 29, of Nashville, Tenn. It was he who on October 10, 1934, kidnaped Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, Louisville, Ky., society matron, and held her for $50,000 ransom. That Robinson has been able to avoid capture so far is largely due, no doubt, to his ability to masquerade in women's clothes.

The Department of Justice "flier" on Robinson, posted in every city and hamlet in the country, shows him attired in both male and female clothing.

Harry Campbell, erstwhile crony of Alvin Karpis, who fell into the Government's bag yesterday in Toledo, Ohio, was being widely sought by the F. B. I., but not so energetically as were Mahan and Robinson.

Called Killer Type.

Mahan, according to Director Hoover, belongs to the "killer" type. He was regarded as a far more dangerous man that his ally in the Weyerhaeuser kidnaping—Harmon M. Waley, 24, who, with his blonde wife, Margaret Waley, 19, now is in the penitentiary, he for 45 years, she for 20.

The Waleys were arrested in Salt Lake, Utah, June 9 of last year, after Mrs. Waley had offered a $5 bill—part of the $200,000 ransom money—in a 5-and-10-cent store. The numbers on the ransom money had been provided the cashier by the Federal Bureau of Investigation several days before.

George Weyerhaeuser, 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Weyerhaeuser, jr., and heir to the world's greatest lumber fortune, was kidnaped by two men on May 24 as he walked home from school in Tacoma, Wash. His family paid the $200,000 ransom, and the curly-headed boy was released eight days after being kidnaped. He was freed on a lonely road 25 miles from his home.

The ransom money pointed a trail to Salt Lake City from the outset. Owners of gasoline filling stations along the route discovered afterward that the two men and the "beautiful blonde" who had stopped at their places had paid them with ransom money.

In Salt Lake City, 20 of the bills were passed by Mrs. Waley in various stores. Then she tried to pass one bill too many, and her arrest and Waley's followed.

Mahan, who had been with the Waleys on the trip to Salt Lake, had left them.

He was in Butte, Mont., the same day that the Waleys were arrested in Salt Lake. He barely escaped capture himself. Policeman James Mooney espied a familiar face as he strolled past a downtown corner about 7 o'clock in the morning. He said afterward that he thought that it was man he had arrested in a bank robbery case six years before.

Escaped Over Fence.

The policeman approached Mahan's automobile, a green sedan. Mahan saw him and started to run, with Policeman Mooney at his heels. He escaped by leaping a nearby fence.

The officer went back to the sedan, smashed the lock of the door, and found $15,000 in bills. These he took to police headquarters, where, after checking with a list of numbers broadcast by the Department of Justice, he found them to be part of the Weyerhaeuser loot.

The identity of Mahan, however, remained a mystery until later that day, when Waley, under arrest in Salt Lake, implicated him in the kidnaping.

The revelation thereafter that both Mahan and Waley, though possessed of long criminal records, were out on parole, led President Roosevelt to instruct Attorney General Homer Cummings to make a detailed investigation of a system which turns hardened criminals loose to prey on the public.

That investigation is now under way.

Mahan, who moved under a dozen or more aliases, was first arrested in Deer Lodge, Mont., on December 2, 1923, for the theft of an automobile. He was sentenced to serve two to four years in the Montana State Prison, but was paroled after serving a year.

Didn't Go Straight.

Mahan apparently had no thought of "going straight."

He was arrested in Butte, Mont., on June 8, 1927, when police found $110,000 in stolen securities in his automobile. They were part of $198,000 in loot taken from the Bank of Rathrum, Idaho, three days before.

Taken to Idaho for trial, Mahan pleaded guilty and was sentenced to serve 20 years in the State Penitentiary. He was a troublesome prisoner, and for nearly two years was in solitary confinement for trying to escape. While he was there, a warrant was received charging him with a bank robbery in Oakville, Wash., in 1926.

Mahan never served the 20 years, not even a substantial part of it. Less than six years after he was received at the penitentiary, he was granted an unconditional pardon, with restoration of all rights and citizenship—this despite the existence of a warrant charging him with another bank robbery.

More bank robberies and assaults followed in the Northwest and then came the Weyerhaeuser kidnaping and Mahan's elevation to a title once held by Al Capone, John Dillinger, "Baby Face" Nelson and Alvin Karpis.

Strikers Fell Policeman.

San Antonio, Tex., May 7 (AP).—Police Sergt. Ferd Fest was knocked down and two other officers roughly handled by strikers at the plant of a women's ready to wear manufacturing company here today when the officers escorted eight workers through a picket line. Forty women and nine men garment workers at the plant walked out yesterday in demand for shorter hours and higher pay.

Slaying Trial Defendant Dies As Case Is Called

Wise, Va., May 7. (AP).—Death nolle prossed the murder charge against Robert Teague just before the State began his trial.

The courtroom was filled when Commonwealth's Attorney Fred Greear's telephone rang and the hospital at Norton reported Teague had just died in intense pain.

Teague was charged with the murder of Cain Wyatt at Dorchester on December 24, 1935.

Hull Pondering Future Policy Of U. S. to Italy

Neutrality Act Embargoes, Recognition of Rule in Ethiopia Are Issues.

The State Department yesterday turned its attention to the delicate problem posed by the Italian conquest of Ethiopia.

Recognition by this Government of an Italian regime in the beaten but unsubdued Ethiopia would controvert long-established principles of American diplomacy, which have been re-asserted vigorously during the Roosevelt Administration—the nonrecognition of sovereignty acquired by force of arms.

One phase of American interest in the invaded country was cleared up with notice to the Department yesterday by Cornelius Van H. Engert, United States Minister to Ethiopia, that Miss Eleanor Meade, 30-year-old American newspaperwoman, had been located and "is well."

Details Not Revealed.

Engert's message was not released generally, so nothing but the bare fact of Miss Meade's discovery and safety was revealed at the State Department. Fears had been felt for her safety after Engert's first check-up of Americans, made immediately on his re-occupancy of the bullet-torn legation building, had shown no trace of the young dark-haired correspondent for Transradio Press.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull remained noncommittal at his press conference yesterday on the subject of the American attitude. It was understood that clarification of the Italian position must come before any decision can be logically reached.

Yesterday the Italians appointed a civil governor for Addis Ababa, formally notifying Minister Engert of the action.

The problems revolve around two questions:

1. Should the United States recognize the Ethiopian government as and when set up by the Italians?

2. Should normal trade relations be resumed with both countries by lifting the arms, ammunition and financial embargoes now applied to both countries.

A careful review of the entire problem and its future ramifications will be the first step, as soon as Italian plans are made clear.

Even then the embargoes may not be immediately lifted, as under the mandatory provisions of the neutrality act the embargoes were declared by President Roosevelt on the two belligerents.

He may lift them when he decides a "state of war" no longer exists. This may mean a formal treaty of peace, informed sources pointed out, as the President has shown himself slow to act in jerking arms embargoes, once applied.

In the case of the Gran Chaco "Green Hell" War, in which an armistice between Paraguay and Bolivia was reached in June of last year, with hostilities ceasing then, a similar American embargo on arms shipments to the two warring nations was not rescinded until November.

An embargo on shipments of arms to China has been in force since March 4, 1922, and similar embargoes are still plastered on Honduras, Nicaragua and Cuba.

However, lifting of financial restrictions on Italy and Ethiopia will probably be insisted on by Mussolini before further negotiations proceed on a reciprocal trade agreement with this country. The successful culmination of the long talks with the French day before yesterday in a French-American trade agreement immediately stimulated other Continental negotiations, it was believed.

Wars Were Condemned.

The "Stimson doctrine," as embodied in the Argentine anti-war pact, ratified by the United States on June 27, 1934, and by Italy on March 14, 1934, is definite in its condemnation of wars of aggression.

The first article condemns such wars and provides for the settlement of disputes by peaceful means.

The second article provides nonrecognition of "any territorial arrangement which is not obtained by peaceful means, nor the validity of the occupation or acquisition of territories that may be brought about by force of arms."

This nonrecognition clause was supposed to have installed teeth in the Kellogg peace pact. The doctrine was invoked by former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson in 1932 against Japan and China, and then in the Manchurian occupation.

Although this country does not yet recognize Manchukuo, the puppet state set up by Japan on the Asiatic mainland, the establishment of American consulates there is made possible by the insistence of Japan that Manchukuo is a self-governing entity. In other words, this country does not recognize Manchukuo because it was obtained by force, but protects American interests there through preservation of the fiction that Manchukuo is a separate state.

Dispute Flares As Italians Use Djibouti Trains

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, May 7.—Italian troops began pouring supplies into the city tonight over the French Djibouti-Addis Ababa railroad to bring relief to residents reduced to the barest necessities.

Unconfirmed reports from Djibouti in French Somaliland said a serious dispute had broken out between Italy and the French company controlling the railroad over the transportation of troops and war material.

Military forces of Marshal Pietro Badoglio assumed control of the railway, Ethiopia's only modern link to the outside world, from the capital to the border of French Somaliland.

The Fascist soldiers were dispatched to reorganize traffic on the line as Ethiopian natives were set to work clearing their own streets of evidences of pillage and destruction.

Under the combined policing of the victorious troops and native constabulary, the city was calm.

Natives Assured.

Conforming to the Italian contention the "war is over," Marshal Badoglio sought to assure peaceful subjugation of natives in territory as yet unoccupied, through propaganda instead of bullets.

Planes which dropped pamphlets assured the inhabitants they need have no fear of molestation under the Italian flag if they lay down their arms and return to peaceful pursuits.

Dispatches reaching Italian headquarters from the south indicated the entrance of troops into Harar, Ethiopia's second city, was imminent.

Military opposition to the columns of Gen. Rodolfo Graziani has vanished, the dispatches declared, and only terrific rains were impeding the advance from Jijiga which was occupied two days ago.

The black-shirted policemen in the capital moved quickly to establish order on the railroad after two Frenchmen were wounded by machine-gun fire from Ethiopian bandits last night.

By virtue of its part ownership of the French constructed railway, Italy may direct traffic activities on that part of the line which lies between Addis Ababa and the Somaliland border. The Fascist nation was granted a minority shareholding in the road at the time of the accord signed between Premier Mussolini and former Premier Pierre Laval of France in January, 1935.

Auxiliary forces of the motorized Italian column which made the hazardous trip to the capital from Dessye arrived to relieve the weary soldiers of the main forces.

Askari (native) troops beat off a direct attack by brigands late last night on the American Legation, killing three Ethiopians.

The Leaflets scattered over the Ethiopian countryside by the Fascist planes were signed by Marshall Badoglio and said:

"Today the troops of the powerful King of Italy entered Addis Ababa. In cities and villages peace and order reigned.

"No measures will be taken against those who abandon arms and resume normal occupations. Under the Italian flag, the people will live in peace, justice and prosperity."

Holes Cut in Legation's Walls Aided Defense, Says Mrs. Engert

Wife of American Minister at Addis Ababa Describes Siege; Took Knitting Needles Instead of Heirlooms, in Her Haste, She Declares.

By the United Press.

Addis Ababa, May 7.—Beleaguered members of the American Legation and those who sought refuge there during the recent bloody rioting held off the frenzied natives by constant firing through holes cut in the legation walls, Mrs. Cornelius Van H. Engert, wife of the American Minister, said today in an interview.

"We cut holes in the legation walls to shoot through," Mrs. Engert said.

"It was a case of dire necessity as we had been under fire since Saturday and had to defend ourselves.

"We also cut holes in the bedroom floors in order to get into the basement for supplies.

"Two of our native women servants were wounded, but none of us was hurt.

"Although I was shot at once when I was in the garden, I did not want to leave the legation when the British minister came for us.

"But our ammunition and supplies were inadequate, so we were forced to leave.

"I had only 30 minutes to decide what I should take with me, as there were many things I thought I might never see again.

"In the excitement, I made some pretty odd decisions. For instance, I took the needles with which I was knitting a skirt for my little girl and left my grandmother's silver spoons on the dining room table."

Despite her near tragic experience, Mrs. Engert appeared none the worse.

Thomas to Quit Radio If U. S. Bans His Song

Pittsburgh, May 7 (AP). — John Charles Thomas, baritone, threatened to quit radio broadcasting if the Federal Radio Commission forbids him to close his programs with "Good night, mother."

He asserted the commission described these words constituted personal communication, banned on the air.

Thomas said:

"I was notified I could not sign off with these words."

He added that he told the commission he would continue to close with "good night, mother," or would say "good-bye broadcasting." Since then, he has not heard from the commission.

Selassie's Gold Crown Hidden in London Bank

London, May 7 (AP).—The gold crown of Emperor Haile Selassie lay safely hidden in the dim vaults of a London bank today

The crown and other imperial insignia of the Ethiopian Negus were brought secretly to London when the Italian advance began to threaten Addis Ababa, it was disclosed.

Locomotive Blast Kills Three Men

By the Associated Press.

Batavia, N. Y., May 7.—A locomotive exploded on the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad south of here today and three men were killed.

The accident occurred east of North Alexander Station, about 6 miles south of here, about mid-afternoon.

Stationmaster Bert Coulter, of North Alexander, said the bodies of the engineer, the fireman and the head trainman had been found, all "pretty badly mangled."

The division superintendent's office in Buffalo said they did not know who was killed, but that their records showed the engineer was Stephen Hasfurter, of Buffalo, with Oscar Arthur, of Elmira, as fireman and E. F. Arwine, of Elmira, as head trainman.

The locomotive was hauling freight, and ten cars of cattle were derailed. Coulter said cattle were "running all over the countryside."

Cabinet Threatens Franc Speculators

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 7.—The French cabinet threatened speculators with "new and more serious measures" today unless an attack against the franc ceased.

The ministers maintained silence as to the character of the measures, but Minister of Finance Marcel Regnier declared "the panic has been artificial and will be stamped out."

A statement of the bank today showed that gold valued at 1,169,000,000 francs ($77,544,000) has been withdrawn in the week ending May 1.

Italy's Merger Of 3 Provinces Now Expected

Return to World Affairs Once Bars Are Lifted Also Is Forecast.

Rome, May 7 (AP).—A return to friendly participation in international affairs once sanctions are lifted will be announced following Saturday night's session of the Fascist Grand Council and Council of Ministers, reliable sources asserted tonight.

This pronouncement, it was stated, probably will be made in connection with a proclamation of Ethiopia's annexation and merger with Eritrea atnd Italian Somaliland under the name of "Italian East Africa."

Plans went forward in Rome to make the Italian Kingdom the Italian Empire, as Fascist soldiers took over a French-owned railroad in Ethiopia and occupied the important southern town of Jijiga. Dispatches from Ethiopia said Harar, second largest city in the country, was expected to fall into Italian hands soon and that complete subjugation o fthe whole country was at hand.

Whether King Victor Emmanuel would be proclaimed Emperor in conjunction with the announcement of Ethiopia's annexation could not be ascertained definitely, but it was regarded as most likely.

League Reform Visioned.

Geneva, May 7 (AP).—Failure to prevent Italy from seizing Ethiopia was expected by observers here tonight to bring a determined move to reform the League of Nations at its September meeting.

Action Not Expected.

Paris, May 7 (AP).—Failure of the League of Nations to take any action on Italy's conquest of Ethiopia at its meeting next Monday was predicted tonight in official circles.

Both France and Great Britain are expected to delay consideration of the whole Ethiopian problem until an extraordinary meeting of the Council June 15, when it will be linked with the problem of Germany's reoccupation of the Rhineland.

Work on Keyser-McCool Bridge Near Completion

Special Dispatch to The Post.

McCool, Md., May 7.—Reinforcing work on the Keyser-McCool Bridge will probably be completed within a week and a half, Douglas P. LeFevre, assistant district engineer of the Maryland State Roads Commission, said last night. Work of placing trestles under one span has been finished, he said, and the other span will be completed by May 15.

The bridge across the Potomac at Hancock will be open for traffic Saturday, according to State officials of the roads commission, and it is expected that the work of replacing the Wiley Ford Bridge over the Potomac in south Cumberland will begin the early part of next week. Lumber supplied by the WPA has already been unloaded.

Roosevelt Asks Criminal Law Improvement

Sends Message to Institute Meeting; Hughes Sees Shortage in Judges.

Administration of justice will be "impossible" without "improvement in the criminal law," President Roosevelt yesterday informed the American Law Institute, meeting here.

Another pressing issue was presented by Chief Justice Hughes when he told the organization a shortage of Federal judges in 15 of 84 districts constituted a "crying evil."

Nevertheless, the Senate a short time later rejected proposals for creation of two additional Federal judgeships in the Southern District of New York.

The President, in a written message, praised the institute on its efforts toward modernization and restatement of the law.

"I am much interested," he said "to learn that you have now begun to draft statutes to be submitted to the legislatures of the various States, the object of which will be to correct legal rules which no longer correspond to present needs.

"This work of correction and modernization appeals to me as a logical outcome of your restatement of the law, which, as I understand it, is an attempt to state the law as it is, without attempting to correct it. * * *

Is Called Necessary.

"It is encouraging for all of us to know that your organization, which combines in its membership leaders of the bench, the bar and law-school faculties, is not only willing but anxious to participate in the improvement of our criminal law, without which a modern administration of justice in its broadest sense is impossible."

Chief Justice Hughes, who received his customary big ovation from the institute, was plain spoken in his demand for a substantial increase in Uncle Sam's jurists.

"Where delays are most serious," he declared, "they are due to a failure to provide an adequate supply of judges to attend to the work of the courts.

"It is a crying evil when the interval between joinder of issue and trial approximates two years for civil jury cases, for suits in equity and for suits in admiralty."

He mentioned by name the Southern District of New York.

Without a trace of satire in his voice he confided he was "happy to report the Supreme Court is still functioning."

"The work of the current term," he hastened to add, "has not suffered by illness or absence of any member. It is probable that when we finish the term the total number of cases disposed of will be somewhat greater than in the previous term."

It was apparently in answer to criticism of the Supreme Court's famed five-to-four decisions that he said:

"Of course, it is expected that there will be differences of opinion. How amazing it is that, in the midst of controversies on every conceivable subject, one should expect unanimity of opinion upon difficult legal questions! * * *"

Record of Disagreements.

"The history of scholarship is a record of disagreements. And when we deal with questions relating to principles of law and their application we do not suddenly rise into a stratosphere of icy uncertainty."

He had Wickersham in mind when he said:

"The highest reward that can come to a lawyer is the esteem of his professional brethren. That esteem is won in unique conditions and proceeds from an impartial judgment of professional rivals.

"It cannot be purchased. It cannot be artificially created. It cannot be gained by artifice or contrivance to attract public attention. It is not measured by pecuniary gains.

"It is an esteem which is born in sharp contests and thrives despite conflicting interests. It is an esteem commanded solely by integrity of character and by brains and skill in the honorable performance of professional duty. * * * George Wickersham won and held that esteem."

Newton D. Baker, war-time Cabinet officer, was elected institute president. Other officers: Charles E. Clark, dean of the Yale Law School; Elihu Root, jr., New York City; Carl B. Rex, Milwaukee, and Senator Van Nuys, Indiana, vice presidents; Judge Goodwin, chairman of the board, and Herbert Harley, Ann Arbor, Mich., secretary-treasurer.

'Uncle Joe' Cannon Honored by House

By the Associated Press.

The House paused for an hour in its legislative duties yesterday to honor the memory of the late Joseph G. (Uncle Joe) Cannon, four times Speaker of the House, and for 46 years a member. It was the hundredth anniversary of his birth.

Both Democrats and Republicans joined in the eulogies after Representative Sabath (Democrat), Illinois, dean of the House, had praised Cannon as "one of the most remarkable men of the age."

He recalled Cannon's "resourcefulness" in holding the House in session for three days and two nights in a stirring battle in 1910 when Democrats and some Republicans were attempting to shear the Speaker of some of his powers and liberalize House rules.

Likening Cannon to Abraham Lincoln, Republican Leader Snell, of New York, said that "courage dominated his character." Cannon, he said, for four decades wielded a greater influence on legislation than any man in Congress.

'Aunt Jemima' Wins $115,000 From NBC

New York, May 7 (AP).—Tess Gardella—the "Aunt Jemima" of stage and radio—sang, shuffled and wisecracked from the witness stand in Federal Court, Brooklyn, to win a verdict of $115,000 today against the National Broadcasting Co., General Foods, Inc., and Log Cabin Products, Inc.

It took a jury less than an hour to reach a decision after listening for three days to phonographic records of "Aunt Jemima" songs, some sung by Miss Gardella and some by substitutes.

In her suit of prior rights, Miss Gardella charged other entertainers using her professional name were hired in her place by N. B. C. These substitutions, she asserted, were misleading to the public and "subverted her art."

Kentuckyian Will Speak At Tribute to Veteran

Representative A. Willis Robertson said yesterday Representative Vergil Chapman, of Kentucky, had accepted an invitation to speak at Sperryville May 11 at a meeting honoring the oldest surviving Confederate veteran in Rappahannock County, according to the Associated Press.

The meeting is to be held by the Sperryville Rotary Club in honor of J. M. Lawrence, 91, a veteran of Company E, Fourth Battalion, Mosby's Rangers.

Broker Jailed Within 24 Hrs. Of Indictment

Less than 24 hours after the District Grand Jury had returned three indictments against him, Carl R. Kurtz, widely known investment broker and clubman, was at Lorton Reformatory, following rapid-fire developments in Justice Peyton Gordon's Court yesterday.

He pleaded guilty to two charges of embezzlement and one of violating the terms of the securities act of 1932. On the first two he was sentenced to terms of from two to seven years, and on the securities charge, to from one to five years, to run concurrently.

The three charges to which Kurtz pleaded guilty covered but a portion of an alleged $297,000 shortage. Officials of the District Attorney's Office explained that many of the persons who are believed to have lost money through dealing with Kurtz were unwilling to prosecute. Only $20,775 was involved in the three indictments.

Kurtz is said to have accepted either money or securities from customers, with the understanding he was to purchase other securities with the proceeds. The complainants were Arthur Stedman Hills, Dr. Howard E. Smith and Commander Claude S. Gillette, who represented the American Society of Naval Engineers.

The broker, a member of the Metropolitan and Chevy Chase clubs, came here from Philadelphia, where his family is socially prominent, 20 years ago. Just a few days ago, it was said, he sent his wife and their two children to her home in Florida.

In addition to his other troubles, Kurtz was named defendant in a civil suit for damages of $6,472.54. The suit, filed by Attorneys Charles V. Imlay and John R. Reed, was based on the alleged failure of Kurtz to deliver to Hills the securities he was given orders to purchase. The sum is one of the items included in the indictments against the 44-year-old broker.

New Hard-Coal Contract Drawn At N. Y. Parley

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 7.—The committee of 14, which has been negotiating a new contract for the anthracite industry, announced tonight that the contract had been completed, subject to ratification by the rank-and-file miners and mine operators.

The new contract will run until April 30, 1938.

A meeting of the full scale committee of 42 representing the United Mine Workers of America was called for 8:30 o'clock tonight to hear the report of the smaller committee which has been conducting the negotiations with the operators.

Five-Day Week Included.

The main points of the agreement are as follows:

1. Beginning May 1, 1937, the mine workers are granted a seven-hour day and five-day week, modified by a provision that the mines may be operated for 6 days on any of 12 weeks throughout the year.

In case of emergency a further extension of the six-day week may be granted by a board set up for that purpose.

2. The seven-hour day applies to outside and inside company men paid by the hour, day or month and provides that the same daily rate will be paid for seven hours that were previously paid for eight hours.

Checkoff Granted.

3. The complete checkoff, whereby the operators collect union dues from the pay rolls of the mine workers is granted.

4. A clause providing for full responsibility on the part of district and international officers of the United Mine Workers of America to prevent strikes in violation of the agreement and to impose discipline for the violations is included.

5. Equalization in a modified form is granted.

6. Some minor provisions including a provision that rate sheets showing colliery rates and conditions be brought up to date, or contained in the agreement.

The agreement will be submitted to members from Districts 1, 7 and 9 at a convention, the time and place of which will be announced later.

Wall Kills Fireman.

Amarillo, Tex., May 7 (AP).—Austin Williams, fireman, was killed beneath a crumbling brick wall here today as a fire destroyed a lumber manufacturing company, a relief station and a general warehouse. The loss was estimated at $5,000,000. The relief station was one serving the poor of 20 counties.

Food Index Lower.

New York, May 7 (AP).—The Dun & Bradstreet weekly food index declined 2 cents last week to $2.58, which compared with $2.62 for the corresponding week last year.

Rate Plan of B. & O. Held I.C.C. Defiance

New York, May 7 (AP).—The Herald Tribune said tonight that the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. has intimated its intention to establish joint freight rates with the Keeshin Transcontinental Freight Lines, Inc., to cover less-than-carload traffic, including pick-up and delivery service, on the basis of halfway rates.

The effect of the move, it was stated, is to treat Keeshin, a Chicago company, as another railroad in the joint rate structure.

The Herald Tribune said the move was tantamount to defiance of an Interstate Commerce Commission ruling and an action upon which rests the fate of the whole structure of less-than-carload rates.

The Keeshin interests, in conjunction with the Chicago Great Western Railroad Co. in a similar hookup, were restrained by the I. C. C., it was stated, and railroads protested that the contemplated competition created rate tariffs prejudicial to them.

The Baltimore & Ohio was reported building a terminal in Manhattan for Keeshin.

Kerchief Stain May Be Clew In Death of Girl

Youth Questioned in Attack on 7-Year-Old Child in Maine.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 7.—Police Capt. James T. Sheehan announced tonight that a chemist reported discovery of blood stains on a handkerchief used by Ralph M. Marr, 18, of Augusta, Me., questioned here concerning the slaying of 7-year-old Mary Proulx at Waterville, Me.

Police Chemist Frank Stratton made his report just as Marr was leaving by automobile for Waterville, where the child's ravished body was found last Tuesday.

Marr was accompanied by Gov. Louis J. Brann, of Maine. The Governor participated today in the long questioning of both Marr and Harry R. Asher, 33, of Brooklyn, N. Y., the latter detained here as a vagrant.

Gov. Brann declared as he was leaving that it was "absolutely necessary" to ask Marr to go to Waterville, because of the many discrepancies in the boy's story concerning his activities last Sunday, the day of the murder."

Marr, the Governor asserted, told police he spent last Sunday with his family, riding, lunching and dining with them.

But his father, the Governor said he had been informed, declared the last time he saw his son was at 3 p. m. Sunday, when he left him on Water street, Augusta.

Asher, who, earlier in the day, Sheehan said, confessed the crime, also volunteered to go to Maine, but was kept at a police station.

Both Sheehan and Brann scouted Asher's confession, describing it as "ridiculous."

Marr denied any knowledge of the crime.

"This convention," said the resolution, which was introduced by Clyde D. Garrett, "recommends the nomination of Gov. Alfred M. Landon stands for adherence to the Constitution, sound principles of government and efficient, economical and honest administration of the office of President of the United States."

Girl Police Clerks Learning to Shoot

Kansas City, May 7 (AP).—Women employes of Kansas City's police department — nominally stenographers and clerks—whipped service revolvers from holsters today and began training as crack-shot feminine manhunters.

Police Commissioner Otto P. Higgins asked 23 record clerks, telephone operators and typists to master the heavy "police .38's." They must learn to shoot fast and accurately in any emergency.

Technically the department has no policewomen, but the girls from headquarters offices frequently are used by the detective bureau as "decoy" investigators and collectors of evidence.

"My theory is, if they have to use a gun they ought to know how," said Higgins.

Boy, 16, Sentenced For Slaying of Uncle

Williamson, W. Va., May 7 (AP).—James Edmund Gaujot, 16, smilingly heard himself sentenced today to the reformatory for the slaying of his uncle, Spanish-American War hero.

The youth pleaded guilty to a charge of shooting Col. A. A. Gaujot, 57, holder of the Congressional Medal of Honor. He told Judge Reno F. Howard his uncle threatened to kill him during an argument over a $12 check.

James' father, Col. Julien Gaujot, also honore dwith a Congressional Medal of Honor, is critically il lin a hospital. He has not talked to his son, attendants said, since the shooting April 13.

Construction Awards.

New York, May 7 (AP).—Engineering construction awards for April, as reported by Engineering News-Record, totaled $195,458,000 for a five-week month, a gain of 34 per cent over the April, 1935, rate.

McDonald Plot Cited

former convict pointed out Sutton as the man he met on Pennsylvania avenue in Washington the summer before the murder.

"Later he told me and Claude Bailey and Ernie Myers he had a job for us to do.

"Then he explained McDonald had been turning up his gambling places to the police."

"He said McDonald was no good and ought to be rubbed out. Yeah, that's what he said. Then he told us he wanted to be sure we knew what McDonald looked like."

"I'd talked Sutton's proposition over with Myers before," he recalled.

"Myers said he agreed with Sutton that Mickey was a 'rat,' and said he had stuck him up once in Baltimore.

"So we went out to the home and lay in the bushes and got the lay of the land.

Decided to Quit.

"When Bailey and I went back to Baltimore with Ernie I decided to pull out."

Jenkins likewise was asked on cross-examination if he had not come to court to "save his neck."

"Yeah, oh yeah, you're right. It was somebody else or me," he answered.

Witnesses who preceded Jenkins to the stand today for the State were Ira N. Gullickson, chief photographer for the Metropolitan police of Washington; Private Joseph Kauf, of the Montgomery County police; Dr. C. E. Hawks, of Montgomery County, who performed the autopsy on Wilson; Dr. O. S. Parrott, superintendent of Washington Sanitarium, in Takoma Park, where Wilson died, and Mrs. Margaret Wilson, widow of the man whose murder the States seek to avenge.

In his opening argument for the State, Pugh told the jury he would prove Sutton was the originator of the crime, and that he would ask for conviction for first-degree murder and ask for the death penalty.

The defense, Whiting said, will attempt to prove that Sutton had nothing to do with the Wilson killing or the plot to slay McDonald.

"Sutton was a friend of McDonald's," Whiting said.

It required one hour and 51 minutes to select the jury. After numerous challenges the veniremen were sworn in at 11:21 a. m.

The jurors who sat in the box today are typical citizens of this prosperious industrial county—business men, factory and railroad workers, miners and farmers.

'Eye' to Explore Stomach Shown City Physicians

Dr. Chevalier Jackson, of Philadelphia, Exhibits Gastroscope Here.

Exploration of the interior of a living person's stomach, a feat which has been attempted for years but not accomplished with a full measure of success until recently" was described here yesterday by Dr. Chevalier L. Jackson, of Philadelphia.

The Schindler flexible gastroscope is the means by which the doctor may survey the stomach and determine the presence of tumors, ulcers or other visible pathological conditions, Dr. Jackson reported to the annual scientific assembly of the District Medical Society.

The gastroscope is a tube about 28 inches long. The lower half is of rubber and flexible, with an electric bulb and tiny lens mounted near the tip. The other half, which does not reach the stomach, is metal and rigid. At the end is a eyepiece, through which the operator makes his observations.

Numerous lenses inside the rubber portion bend the light waves, so that the operating surgeon can literally see around corners. After entrance into the esophagus has been made, he inflates the stomach by pressing a hand bellows and forcing in air.

Covers Most of Area.

The organ is then ready for inspection. All but a very small portion is vulnerable to the "internal eye," which can be raised, lowered or turned from side to side at the will of the operator.

Although the gastroscope, in its present high state of development, is not yet used extensively, it has made possible many interesting discoveries, Dr. Jackson declared. He is professor of clinical bronchoscopy and esophagoscopy at Temple University Medical School and the son of Dr. Chevalier Jackson, inventor of the bronchoscope.

Perhaps the most interesting feature of the gastroscope, at least from the patient's point of view, is the fact that its use is practically painless. A local anesthetic may be administered, however, if the patient desires. Whatever discomfort is experienced is felt in the throat and not in the stomach, explained Dr. David Davis, who, with Dr. R. Lyman Sexton, exhibited the device at the assembly.

Although much still remains to be learned about glomerulonephritis, or Bright's disease, intelligent treatment of the sufferer may not only keep him alive indefinitely but restore the feeling of good health, delegates to the scientific session were told by Dr. James P. O'Hare, assistant professor of medicine at Harvard University.

While noteworthy advances have been made in the study of kidney ailments, the fundamentals laid down almost a century ago by Richard Bright still deserve the practioner's serious attention, Dr. O'Hare said.

Generally speaking, prescription of a low-protein diet should be avoided, contrary to past practice, said Dr. O'Hare.

Be wary of the physician who says all you need is "a change of scenery" to cure your nervousness, Dr. Roger S. Cohen, Washington psychiatrist, told the conference.

"A complete change of scenery," he said, "is good advice in some few cases but to use this formula indiscriminately for all sorts and types of nervous patients, not only fails to do justice to the patient, but may be exactly the wrong thing to do."

"An aggravation of symptoms often occurs," he said, "when the patient has made the change and then wakes up to find that it does not produce the marvelous improvement which he expected. Patients who present frank psychotic symptoms, I believe, are not benefited merely by changing the scene.

"After all, distorted beliefs and delusions cannot be cured merely by transporting the patient from one place to another — 'geographical psychotherapy,' as one of my friends named it."

Admission of Dr. Cohen and Dr. Isaac J. Silverman, also of Washington, to membership was announced this week by the American Psychiatric Association.

Other speakers yesterday at the final session of the medical assembly were Drs. R. M. LeComte, Henry L. Darner, R. Rhett Rathbone and Fred R. Sanderson, all of Washington.

Dr. Victor R. Alfaro, general chairman, was toastmaster at the annual banquet last

Court Orders Wealthy Wife To Support Estranged Spouse

New York Justice Rules for City in Action to Force Woman to Provide for Mate Unable to Obtain Employment.

By the United Press.

New York, May 7.—A judge who believes the reading of good books can bring criminals back across the line that divides law and lawlessness, ruled today that a woman with money must support her destitute husband.

City officials said they were unable to find a precedent for the decision made in domestic relations court by Justice Jacob Panken. His ruling was a broad interpretation of law and after it was made Panken added a few remarks about foreign "fortune hunters" who marry wealthy American girls. He mentioned names and cited cases.

Jurisprudence assumes, Panken said, that the husband is responsible for support and maintenance of the family, but there are important exceptions. One such exception, he ruled, held good in the case of William Hodson, commissioner of public welfare, vs. Mrs. Sadie Picker.

Action Started.

The facts of the case:

George Picker is a furrier, at present out of work. Officials of the furriers' union swore in court that his prospects of getting a job were slight. He is estranged from his wife, and, accordingly, he applied for home relief. The Home Relief Bureau investigated and found that Picker was destitute, but that his wife owned real estate and had a bank account. There is a law stipulating that if two persons are mutually dependent on one another, they can be sued for failure to support. Hodson sued Mrs. Picker.

The case came before Justice Panken. Attorney for Mrs. Picker argued that she had no responsibility toward her husband unless he was disabled, pointing out that Picker was on relief only because he could not find work.

Fortune Hunters Hit.

Panken's decision said the marrow of the matter was whether the State or city governments would have to take care of Picker if his wife refused to support him. The court found that such was the case and entered an order for Mrs. Picker to assume the support of her husband.

In the decision was the phrase "fortune hunters" and the judge was asked to elaborate on that. He said cases of where wives contributed to support of husbands were frequent. Panken mentioned "Anne Gould and the Count Boni de Castellane, Consuelo Vanderbilt and the Duke of Marlborough, and all the girls who became wives of the M'Divanis."

Panken has been Socialist candidate for Governor of New York, but his work on the bench has attracted wider attention. Some time ago he began sentencing wayward children to read books and send reviews of them to him. He said he had instilled a sense of good citizenship in many delinquent juveniles without sending them to correction homes.

Woman Is Held On 'Starvation School' Charge

Alleged Operator Seized After 'Pupil' Reports Loss of 25 Pounds.

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, Wash., May 7.—Police widened their investigation of what they termed a "starvation school" tonight as William Jussila, trembling in a heavily blanketed bed, told of losing 25 pounds in 6 weeks as a "pupil" at the school.

The gaunt pupil, now weighing 107, was found by police in a cottage maintained by Mrs. Linda Burfield Hazzard, arrested as the operator of the "school." Previously he had been reported missing.

Mrs. Hazzard was charged with practicing osteopathy and medicine without a license, but she ridiculed the accusations. She insisted to police persons under her care were "pupils," not patients.

Jussila told police he went to Mrs. Hazzard for treatment of a stomach ailment. He said he received vegetable soup for breakfast, a gallon of honey-sweetened lemonade for lunch and a baked potato and vegetable salad for dinner.

Investigation of the "starvation school" was brought about by an association of physicians, prompted by an insurance company. A search for Jussila began after he filed a claim with the insurance company under a health and accident policy.

Police records showed Mrs. Hazzard was convicted of manslaughter in 1911 after the starvation death of Mrs. Claire Williamson, wealthy Englishwoman. In 1925 she was convicted of practicing osteopathy and dieting without a license.

The offenses are misdemeanors.

In this charred-oak keg is a whiskey you'd praise above all others for its delicate aroma . . . if we sold it straight.
The whiskey in this keg would be widely sought after for its rich fullness of body . . . if we sold it straight.
This whiskey has a velvety smoothness that would appeal to every fine whiskey-lover . . . if we sold it straight.
And in this keg is a whiskey with one of the rarest flavors ever achieved. It would be a leader . . . if we sold it straight.

EVERY straight whiskey we make would have some one of these particular claims to greatness —if we sold it straight.

But . . . we prefer to reserve such whiskies—to guard their benevolent qualities jealously for a very special purpose. For the purpose of making Four Roses—America's greatest whiskey.

We prefer to take fine, straight American whiskies—each with its own outstanding characteristic—and blend them together with the skill three-quarters of a century have taught us.

And thus we produce Four Roses —one superlative whiskey that's better by far than any one of these straight whiskies by itself could ever be—the finest whiskey you ever tasted!

FOUR ROSES

Frankfort Distilleries, Incorporated, Louisville & Baltimore, makers of Four Roses (94 proof), Paul Jones (92 proof), Old Oscar Pepper and Mattingly & Moore (both 90 proof)—all blends of straight whiskies.

Actress Dies in Plunge From Plane in France

Biarritz, France, May 7 (AP).—Police tonight were investigating the death of an actress who they said either jumped or fell from an airplane piloted by a Spaniard, Gonzalo de Lagandara, a son-in-law of the Marques de Soriano.

The body of Mlle. Germaine Recarte, 26, was found in a field after the pilot told officials at the Biarritz airport that she "disappeared" somewhere between Grenoble and Biarritz.

Airport officials said that the chief pilot at the field had strapped the young woman into the plane before she started the flight.

Dr. McBain, 55, Former G.W.U. Teacher, Dies

Dean of Graduate College at Columbia Native of Toronto.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 7.—Howard Lee McBain, dean of the Graduate College at Columbia University, died today. He was 55 years old. Death was caused by heart disease, the university announced.

Dean McBain, a native of Toronto, Canada, had been a member of the university faculty since 1913. Previously he taught at the University of Virginia, George Washington University and the University of Wisconsin.

Dr. McBain was appointed dean of the Columbia University faculty, teaching political science, philosophy and pure science in 1929.

Three years ago he was invited by the Cuban government to aid in revising that country's electoral codes. Two years later, after doing considerable preparatory work on the Cuban political system, he was invited to become adviser to the government, but declined.

Outspoken in presenting his own concepts of life, he rejected various beliefs in individual immortality on the ground that they were "unproved and unprovable."

He was born in 1880, obtained his bachelor of arts degree at Richmond College in 1900 and his master of arts in 1901. Subsequently he added the degrees of doctor of law and doctor of philosophy to his accomplishments after study at Columbia.

Dr. McBain married Agnes Bartlett, of Warsaw, N. Y., in 1910. They had two children, Bartlett and Mary.

From assistant principal of the Richmond, Va., high school, a post he held from 1901 to 1904, he progressed in educational circles through a series of instructional chairs, linking his work in the classroom with public service.

In 1915 he was special counsel for the City of New York before the State Constitutional Convention, and was a member of this city's board of education from 1916 to 1918. He had been, also, associate editor of the National Municipal Review and the Political Science Quarterly.

Dr. McBain wrote a number of books on law and government, including, in 1928, a volume called "Prohibition, Legal and Illegal."

Ships That Pass.

Beatrice Harraden did not begin writing until she neared thirty, yet then continued to do so almost until the end of her long life. She published many novels and short stories, some of them—such as "Out of the Wreck I Rise"—worthy of critical praise. But she gained laurels only through her second novel, and that one, although still known to almost everybody by its title, is read by nobody at all.

A tragic romance of two Davos consumptives, it deserved preservation for the superb literary trick whereby it conveyed to the reader the veritable shock of sudden death. But this was not the reason for its general welcome. It appeared when the cause of feminism was still regarded as dangerously subversive, and while the world, today surfeited with "strong" fiction, liked nothing better than that form of amusement—because the supply was then so limited. To the straight-laced year of 1893, the mere name which its author gave this brief tale suggested somewhat perilous pursuits, notwithstanding that it was taken from among the most moral of the ever moral Longfellow's poem.

These were the reasons for the popularity of "Ships That Pass In the Night." Now the author's death is chiefly noteworthy as providing a striking example of how, occasionally, a writer can acquire a high degree of transitory fame by producing a single book which pleases the crowd, regardless of the quantity or quality of output as a whole.

In The Legislative Jam.

As political storms gather on Capitol Hill preliminary to the party conventions, Congressional leaders are beginning to jettison all legislative measures except those considered absolutely essential to the President's program. Both houses are eager to shake the dust of Washington from their feet before the Republicans meet at Cleveland on June 9. In the scramble to enact "must" bills and to promote political ambitions at every opportunity a considerable number of important measures are likely to be lost.

It may be taken for granted that some form of tax and work-relief bills will be enacted. A number of appropriation bills, too, must be finally approved. There is no danger of Congress closing its doors for the season before these necessary steps have been taken. The chief cause for apprehension is that it may railroad through an unintelligible and destructive tax bill and vote another huge grant of funds to the WPA without any effort to correct gross abuses already exposed in the work-relief system.

A number of important measures appear to have been abandoned because of the prospective row in the House over the Frazier-Lemke bill. This inflationary scheme to refinance farm mortgages will be forced to a vote as a political trick. Ordinarily it would be defeated with relative ease, but on the eve of an election a large number of congressmen will lack the courage to vote against anything ostensibly designed to benefit the farmer. The consequent pulling and hauling will serve the same purpose, so far as our legislative machine is concerned, as a monkey wrench in the gears of a delicate motor.

This prospect is especially distressing because it threatens to block some constructive measures that still require a good deal of thoughtful attention. In this category is the slum reclamation program. Hearings on the Wagner bill have been completed on the Senate side, but rather extensive amendments appear to be essential, and the measure must still run the gantlet of Senate and House. The flood-control bill, which has been delayed by pork-barrel tactics, is of great importance to the regions devastated by high waters a few weeks ago.

Delay in the enactment of new ship subsidy legislation would leave the American merchant marine in an unfortunate state of uncertainty. Likewise, there is pressing need for action on the Coolidge-Kerr bill to facilitate the deportation of criminal aliens and prevent injustice to many law-abiding residents from foreign countries. The pure foods bill has too long awaited intelligent consideration. Of special interest to the District is the Sisson bill to end infringement upon educational freedom in Washington.

It is too much to expect that all the important bills awaiting consideration will be disposed of before Congress adjourns. But that body should certainly have enough sense of responsibility to devote what time is available to serious consideration of measures that are unmistakably identified with the public welfare.

Confirming Previous Doubts.

George O. May, a nationally known accountant and a Treasury adviser under President Wilson, tells the Senate Finance Committee he does not find in the statistics presented by the Treasury any ground for believing that the proposed tax on corporate surplus would permanently increase governmental revenue. "It is, of course, possible that it will do so," he said, "but the Treasury has not, to my mind, made out any case that it will."

A good many critics of the Administration's tax program have charged the Treasury with undue optimism in placing the net corporate income for the current calendar year at more than $7,000,000,000. Mr. May gives the Treasury the benefit of the doubt on this score. But he demolishes its estimates of revenue by calling attention to the statistical tricks employed to produce inflated tax yields. If the experts can find an answer to his very specific charges, they owe an explanation to the public and to the Senate Finance Committee, now being urged to approve the tax on corporate surplus as a means of cutting the budgetary deficit.

The justifiable doubt cast upon the dependability of the Treasury's estimates is enhanced by the failure of Mr. Morgenthau's advisers to save him from making what Mr. May bluntly calls "an obvious and serious misstatement of fact" while testifying before the Finance Committee. The Secretary of the Treasury is quoted as estimating that "under the present law more than four and one-half billion dollars of corporation income in the calendar year 1936 will be withheld from stockholders and that if this income were fully distributed the resultant yield in additional individual income taxes would be about $1,300,000,000."

As a matter of fact, the Treasury estimates included about $1,100,000,000 of corporate income that would under present laws be payable to the Federal Government in taxes. That is plain from the statements made by the Treasury last March for the benefit of the Ways and Means Committee. It is confirmed by the recent testimony of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

The Secretary of the Treasury cannot be expected to know each detail of a complicated tax bill. But he should certainly have sufficient knowledge to avoid giving highly misleading testimony when he appears before a Congressional committee. Indeed, Secretary Morgenthau's error is of a character to create doubt as to his understanding of the proposal which he is advocating. It also reflects unfavorably upon the advisers who have either led him astray, or at least failed to protect him from the commission of easily avoidable blunders.

Mr. May's criticism is especially telling because the proceeds from destructive analysis of the proposed measure to a constructive proposal for reaching corporations that try to escape payment of taxes. While in sympathy with the Treasury's desire to reach tax dodgers, he points out that the income earned by corporations is withheld for many highly useful and necessary purposes. Therefore, he suggests a careful classification of corporate taxpayers, based upon a study of their accounts, as a preliminary to the formulation of legislation in this field. He further warns against constant piecemeal changes in the tax system, producing unexpected stresses and strains "which can only be guarded against by careful and prolonged study."

In his testimony Mr. May not only confirmed doubts upon the value of the proposed tax on corporate surplus as a revenue producer, but delivered a much-needed lecture on the evil consequences of "hit or miss" tax laws. And, incidentally, he touched upon various undesirable economic and social consequences of the proposed measure which have apparently escaped the attention of Administration spokesmen.

One cannot avoid the conclusion that the Treasury needs a few experienced officials of his caliber, both to save it from precipitate experimentation and to insure that when the department head appears before a Congressional committee the testimony will be of a character on which legislation may safely be based.

Another Trade Agreement.

Announcement of the conclusion of a reciprocal trade agreement with France has been expected for some time. In the absence of detailed information regarding the nature of the concessions on both sides, comment is necessarily general in character. With devaluation of the franc looming as a strong possibility, moreover, it is possible that modifications in the terms of the agreement may soon become necessary.

However, it is safe to assume that provision has been made for protecting both countries against possible injury from unforeseen changes in the value of either the dollar or the franc. The pact with Belgium, for instance, concluded just prior to devaluation of that nation's currency, allowed for revision or termination of the agreement on short notice. Of course, as these trade agreements become firmly established they should operate to make the currencies of trading nations more stable.

Since a large proportion of our export trade to France is affected by quota restrictions, it may be assumed that we shall benefit substantially from liberalization of these quotas, as well as from tariff concessions. France, in return, will be accorded reductions in duties on specified products, probably largely non-competitive.

Most important, however, will be the advantage growing out of removal of the constant uncertainty, and fear of additional restrictions that has hampered trade between France and the United States and embittered important commercial relationships. With an agreement assuring each nation of fair treatment in the other's markets, one of the major obstacles to a healthy revival of trade will be removed.

The WPA Debauch.

In spite of the moral so abundantly spread upon the record, the House seems about to repeat last year's blunder of a huge, blanket relief appropriation. At a time when mounting criticism from every corner of the Nation attests the abuses, the waste and the inefficiency inseparable from present unemployment relief procedure, the Administration is preparing to drive through a bill certain to perpetuate and extend these faults.

This prospect is the more offensive because on at least four major counts the Hopkins theory of relief fails utterly, and is indeed foredoomed to failure. In the first place, it treats the problem of unemployment relief as a temporary emergency, instead of attempting to handle it as the enduring responsibility of government which it is certain to prove. When all these billions have been squandered there will be little or nothing to show for them beyond the work projects actually completed. But the unemployed, after they have been tided over temporarily in most extravagant fashion, will still be unemployed. On this point Mr. Hopkins' brilliant defense is that it is undesirable to have a permanent relief program so long as there are so many out of work.

In the second place, the Hopkins' theory is one of "after me the deluge." The necessity of raising the money which he is so recklessly squandering apparently never occurs either to the WPA Administrator or to his chief. The proposed relief appropriation of $1,425,000,000, not counting $308,000,000 for the CCC, is excluded from the budget and all of the funds are to be raised by further borrowing. Mr. Hopkins talks glibly, and very superficially, about the desirability of a more equitable distribution of the national income. But the curious way in which he approaches that goal is to pile up an ever-increasing load of national debt.

In the third place, the Hopkins' theory of relief is so demoralizing to the entire structure of American Government that one doubts whether its proponents can possess even an elementary understanding of the principles on which this government is based. A Mussolini or a Hitler would naturally centralize relief machinery in the National Capital, as Hopkins insists is desirable. But any thoughtful American, particularly if he called himself a Democrat, should as naturally insist that the relief problem be handled through State and local agencies, subject to such Federal standards and regulations as seem desirable to safeguard the necessary Federal contributions.

Finally the Hopkins' system, if one is generous enough to call it a "system," could scarcely be more wasteful and demoralizing if waste and demoralization were its primary objectives. None can effectively deny that it encourages loafing and inefficiency. The productivity of the WPA is so far below that of ordinary employment that to call it "work" relief is a downright misnomer.

It is only too clear that the WPA program, now up for extension, is definitely retarding recovery. This is not merely because of its enormous cost, but even more because it is schooling the population to believe that "every American citizen has a right"—Mr. Hopkins' own phrase—to live well at Government expense. When the "right" to live off society instead of the "duty" to contribute to it is emphasized by high officials, then is the collapse of the American tradition already well advanced.

Psyching The Quints.

Though there is 25 years' difference, almost to the month, in the ages of Juliana of Holland and the Dionnes of Callandar, speculative romanticists find themselves contemplating the same question regarding all of them—when, if ever, are they going to marry? According to her subjects, the Princess shows no disposition to find a husband. And, if psychological deductions mean anything, the quints will be even more contrary on the subject.

Dr. Donald A. Laird, director of the Colgate University psychological laboratory, gives three seemingly logical reasons why Cupid will hesitate a long time before wasting his darts on these five prominent young ladies of Canada. They will be wealthy in their own right, fickle, and always more or less heavily chaperoned. They have already had a pretty fair dose of what life means to the Doris Dukes and the Babs Huttons. In the quints' case, even Hollywood went to Mahomet and they have ignored as many products as if they had actually been able to sign on the dotted line. It may even be that eventually they will feel that a career in front of the camera is preferable to one at Callandar.

However, Dr. Alan Brown, Toronto child specialist, does not agree with Dr. Laird that the Misses Dionne will be man-haters. He insists that "the provincial government is quite capable of taking care of the quints." So are Netherland officials, for that matter, quite efficient in handling the affairs of state for Juliana. These doctors seem to forget that they are dealing with the problem for which neither government nor psychologists have ever found a solution—l'affaire de coeur.

The Negro Vote.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: By gratuitous misuse of the ashes of Abraham Lincoln as a "smoke screen" of his recent attack on the Republican Party from the floor of the House of Representatives, Mr. Mitchell, only colored Congressman, quite palpably indicated to this writer that he was indeed making most of the mistake of J. E. Stephens, former member of the New York Legislature from Afric Harlem.

Mr. Stephens, Harlem's suavest, if not most astute, politician, was for three successive terms the lone Negro of the New York Assembly. But he finally was confronted with the choice between party fealty and so-called race loyalty. He chose "race," and lost. Race may elect; party certainly nominates, and nomination must precede election.

Congressman Mitchell is an Administration man. He has avoided "race" so persistently as to bring down on himself the opposition of the Afric Professional Upliftery sponsoring the anti-lynching bill, now petering out in Congress. This because he, the only race Congressman, refused definitely to go along with them.

Congressman Mitchell will need the colored vote out in Chicago next November; and after performances of party fealty a raceology gesture was wholly essential. Hence, obviously, disinterment of Lincoln's corpse for that purpose on the floor of the House.

Incidentally there is just about as much of a "Negro vote" nationally as there is a "labor vote" or a "horse vote." Where colored persons vote they generally do so as other individuals and groups—of individuals—not of race: from the standpoint of 'me and mine," the "mine" having individual, not race significance.

To Arlington Voters.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Before election day next Tuesday, I should like to recommend that the voters of Arlington County read carefully a little booklet published annually by the auditor of the county. It contains many interesting facts which bear upon their future welfare. It tells us that we have already borrowed and still owe millions of dollars for schools, roads, water and sewer systems, etc. And, for this reason, we have an annual engagement, which must be met, from now until 1964 with Arlington County's tax collector. Not for this bonded indebtedness alone, but also for current costs of running the government and maintenance of county improvements.

In view of the foregoing gloomy facts, it would appear that another bond issue at this time for any purpose whatsoever is both unjustified and unwise. If county bond issues are permitted to continue unchecked and higher taxes, which inevitably follow, are levied, it is feared that the majority of Arlington property owners—many of whom are now past middle age—will no longer have their homes on that glorious debt emancipation day in far-off 1964.

Vote For The District?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At last it seems that the people of this city are about to be given a chance to become citizens of the U. S. A. Mrs. Norton has announced that she will try to get a vote for Washington plank in the Democratic platform. To make "the cheese more binding" Senator Capper will strive to get the Republican Party to do likewise.

Now it is up to the people of this city to organize and support Mrs. Norton and Senator Capper. I suggest that a vote-for-Washington association be organized. The organization would, of course, have to charge an initiation fee and some kind of monthly dues. The money would be used to support known friends of the District and to oppose the re-election of known enemies of the local people.

Townsend And The New Dealer.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If such a thing is possible, I would like to ask if there is one concrete, logical reason the House had for investigating the Townsend old-age revolving pension officers and in so doing spend $50,000 of the taxpayers' money.

Has any person ever heard of a Townsendite complaining as to how the money was being spent? The House claims crooked work. If such be the case what is our Department of Justice for? The only dissenters are those "now appearing before the committee."

It is odd that this investigation bill should have been indorsed by the Administration House leaders, when the President himself, in every one of his recent speeches has advocated the Townsend policy, namely that we must have a greater purchasing power. Last fall in Atlanta, Ga., the President said the reason we are on a third-class diet was because the people did not have the money to buy more and better food. Last Saturday at New York City he said that if all the 7,000,000 people living in New York City could afford to buy the bread, meat, milk and clothing that their health and decent living call for, crop production from 3,000,000 more acres of crop land would be necessary.

The big difference between the President and Townsendism is that the Townsendites have a plan for doing what Mr. Roosevelt proposes should be done, but offers no plan.

Speed Of Buses.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having within the past week had one of the most terror-filled, hair-raising rides within my experience, I am moved to ask if The Post will not add its voice in condemning careless, fast and furious bus driving.

Now I know and appreciate that bus drivers work on schedule—if they leave here late, they must arrive somewhere else on time, and so on. But is that sufficient excuse for unnerving the bus-riding public? For unnerve us it does; and woe be more than ever unto us if we must try to stand on our feet. And, if the schedules are too rigid, it seems to me there should surely be some means of adjusting them to allow for proper speed and the allowance of adequate time for passengers to board and alight from the bus.

A Body Of Yes-Men.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Roosevelt wants Congress to adjourn by June 1. The Executive Department has made of the Legislative Department a body of "yes-men." Congress should take its time and weigh carefully the pros and cons in connection with any measure before it, and with all problems that cry out for attention.

The speed with which the House passed the tax bill, in spite of the fact that it was incomprehensible to the majority makes me wonder why the actions of Zioncheck were singled out for newspaper attention.

Re-echoes Of 1668.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since House leaders of the Administration have sidetracked the Sisson bill to repeal Blanton's pet little "Red Rider" designed to keep teachers "pay-triotic," a little research will show how mild the "Red Rider" is.

In reading a copy of the "Life of Charles Haddon Spurgeon," by Russell H. Conwell, former head of Temple University, of Philadelphia, on page 121 I find reference to a Benjamin Keach about 1668. Keach was convicted in court of having published a New and Easy Primer for children. I will quote:

The merciful judge pronounced upon the culprit the following sentence:

"Benjamin Keach, you are hereby convicted for writing, printing and publishing a seditious and schismatical book, for which the court's judgment is this, and the court doth award: That you shall go to jail for a fortnight without bail or mainprize; and the next Saturday to stand trial upon the pillory at Aylesbury in the open market from 11 o'clock till 1, with a paper upon your head with the inscription: For writing, printing and publishing a schismatical book entitled 'The Child's Instructor; or a New and Easy Primer.' . . .

"And the next Thursday to stand, in the same manner and for the same time, in the market at Winslow; and then your book shall be openly burnt before your face by the common hangman, in disgrace of you and your doctrine. And you shall forfeit to the King's majesty the sum of £20 and shall remain in jail until you find sureties for your good behavior and for your appearance at the next assizes; then to renounce your doctrines and to make such public submisison as shall be enjoined you. Take him away, keeper!"

Keach simply replied: "I hope I shall never renounce the truths I have written in that book."

Republicans' Hope.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At the present time, the re-election of Roosevelt seems certain. My opinion is based more on the stupidity of the chiefs of the Republican Party than on the "medicine-show" tactics of the incumbents. Although the aping of the Brain Trust did not do the Republican chances any good, the greater blunder, in my opinion, is the Landon bandwagon, which, I have a slight suspicion, is nurtured by the Farleyites.

Ballyhoo and publicity must be met by ballyhoo and publicity. The horde of newspapermen and publicity agents on the Government pay roll will prove too much for any Republican candidate who believes in the "best mousetrap in the world" strategy. What the Republicans must get is a fighter type of candidate—like Col. Frank Knox or Senator Vandenberg—around whom all citizens disgusted with the failures and the spoils system of the New Deal can rally.

No matter who wears the arms of the Republican Party, he should be able to exchange blow for blow with the black knights of the Democratic - Jackson - Jefferson - Lincoln party.

The Campaign Issue.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There never was a dollar spent that was wasted—even if it was spent to dig a hole and then fill it up again.

The only issue of this campaign is whether this is a Government of the people, by the people and for the people, or whether it's just a Government for Wall Street and the captains of industry. Don't let them befog your mind on the issue by pulling the same old mildewed cry of communism, socialism, bolshevism or any other "ism." If any one of these howlers of waste was getting all the money that was being spent by the Government for relief and the suffering humanity—they would never yeep.

One of Those Three A's Aces

Post Office, Friday.

THERE are so many people always trying to get a job in the Three A's that this columnist has often wondered what it must be like to work there. Now he knows.

* * *

At least, he's been told, quite frankly, what one Three A's worker thinks it's like.

* * *

She writes that, in her opinion

* * *

But just listen, please, to what she writes!

* * *

She writes:

"I am glad I have a job. My family needs the money. I worked hard to get the job. I stood in line—sat in offices—pulled political wires—smiled and looked pleasant did all the manipulating my yokelish mind could conceive as being helpful in getting a job.

"And I got this one. And it's with the Three A's.

* * *

"It is some fun not at all.

* * *

"Why?

"Don't ask me all my kicks—there are too many for your Column.

* * *

"And, if I record a few of them, don't print my name onto them. I may not like the job—but, just the same, I am not exactly hankering to get fired

* * *

"Well, for one thing, the place is overrun with old ladies who constantly chafe if a window be opened 2 inches to permit the entry of fresh air—or fresh air in the entry, let alone the offices. Consequently, colds are prevalent and catching. Likewise—and likewise consequently—headaches and evil tempers are prevalent and catching.

"Those tempers especially. We are all engaged in doing a grand work for the rebuilding of something or other, and we're enthusiastic about it, not to say patriotic. But small feuds occupy much of the working time and necessitate a good deal of clandestine whispering.

* * *

"Our patriotic attention to our rights takes up even more time. Petitions circulate constantly: 'We want' — 'We suggest' — 'Could we have'—'WE DEMAND.'

"And the overseers, most of whom are not exactly to the manner of authority born, merely give those petitions the once-over once and say 'I'll think about it.' And the hirelings gnaw their cuticle, sitting around waiting for something to happen.

* * *

"And nothing ever happens.

* * *

* * *

"Of course, trivialities happen: courting, of course. There is quite a good bit of courting going on. Also, the boys and girls congregate in the halls—drink cokes—swap stories—gossip about their fellow-workers — compare stepping-out notes—and revile their lowly lot in life.

"Also, everybody is happy on one day: pay day. Everybody is happy then, even though a good portion of a good many of the envelopes' contents has to be turned over to the loan-sharks.

* * *

"But can you call such things real happenings?

"Most of us over here can't.

* * *

* * *

"For my part, I'm on the night-shift—permanently, I gather. That shift stretches to the ghoulish hour of midnight, 'when graveyards yawn'—and when I yawn my fool head off. I have tried to get myself shifted from the night-shift to the day-shift, but such efforts are just the butting of my dome against a stone wall.

"Others get shifted.

"I do not.

* * *

"Why don't I get shifted?

* * *

"Am I right in assuming that I am being persecuted?

* * *

"Or am I persecuting you by asking you? . . .

* * *

"I know what you are thinking. You are thinking that I am envious.

"So here's the truth:

"Were I a beautiful girl, or were I a dumber girl, I might have an easier time. But I am lanky and unattractive—and I cannot bend the neck to receive the scornful kicks of the boot.

* * *

"Aw, well—nothing lasts! That's one thing.

"Even if you don't print my name to this piece, some day—some fine day—I shall get canned. And then I shall enjoy myself. For I shall sneer, declaring that my real worth was not recognized—and I shall laugh bitterly at my gullibility in ever thinking that I might get a promotion by working for it and then asking for it.

"I shall retire to the Missouri mountains and rusticate. I shall go barefoot and spend three minutes daily thumbing my nose in the general direction of the invisible Towers of Civilization.

"Happy days will be here again—or, rather, there!"

The Outlook For India

Conquest Of Ethiopia Affects England's Colonies.

Italy's successful conquest of Ethiopia is a severe blow to British prestige and one which may have far-reaching consequences for the future of the British Empire. Of that empire, India, now granted a large degree of dominion home rule, is the keystone. Because of the significance of this development, The Post requested a well-known British commentator on imperial affairs to prepare two articles on the Indian scene. Commander King-Hall has just returned to London from a visit to India, where he was asked to assist at the inauguration of the Indian Institute of International Affairs. The first of these two articles follows:

By Commander Stephen King-Hall.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

IT IS illustrative of the new forces which are at work in the Indian Empire that in April, 1936, the executive council of the new Indian Institute of International Affairs held its first meeting at Delhi. India now falls into line with Great Britain and the other dominions in her possession of such an institute; the corresponding body in the United States being the Council on Foreign Relations in New York.

During a recent visit to India, in the course of which I met representatives of most points of view in the country from the returning Viceroy, Lord Willingdon, to Mr. Gandhi, it became clear that Indian history is about to start a new chapter. In April, 1937, full provincial autonomy will come into force and steps are being actively pursued to bring the new federal central government into existence. At one time it seemed as if this latter event, which depends upon the conclusion of a series of agreements between the provinces of British India and the rulers of the native states, would not occur until 1940, but for reasons I shall mention in a moment it now seems possible that the Federation of India may be inaugurated by the King-Emperor at Delhi in 1938.

Observer Notes Wide Bewilderment.

THE CHIEF impression left upon my mind as a result of this visit to India is one of the uncertainty and almost bewilderment which permeates opinion out there.

For nearly a century the Indian civil service, a body of disinterested, skilled and highly trained officials, have been not only administering but directing the government of India. Now in the provinces, great tracts of land, some of which support over 50,000,000 souls, 90 per cent of political control is to pass into the hands of elected assemblies.

A cabinet of Indian ministers will be responsible even for such key matters as finance and law and order. In other words the civil service, which in the past has run the country and as an afterthought informed the politicians what is happening, will in future take their orders from the politicians both as to what is to be done and how much money is to be spent in the doing.

The Administrator dislikes politics. He knows—or thinks he knows—that certain public works are needed; a new road or a great dam, or a long-term program of school building. He likes to feel that once he has launched his scheme it will proceed to its appointed end without being menaced by such unforeseen events as a sudden change of government.

The senior members of the Indian Civil Service have little faith in the administrative ability of the Indian or the statesmanship of Indian politicians, and they view the immediate future with dismay. They feel that it is impossible to make long-term plans and they fear that much of the administrative structure they have laboriously erected will be allowed to decay.

It is no consolation to them to be told that a deterioration in the standards of government in India is an inevitable and necessary part of the process of enabling Indians to rule themselves. This attitude is general among the older civilian servants, men who have spent the best years of their lives in making bricks with precious little straw in the heat and dust of the Indian sun. The younger men take a more "political" view of the situation, but I had the impression that there is a danger that the new recruits (a steadily decreasing number of whom are coming from Great Britain) may, unlike their fathers, look on India less as a place to serve than as a place in which they may earn a living.

JAWAHARLAL NEHRU.

British Civil Servants See Empire Dissolving.

IF THEN, the British are uncertain of themselves in India, if they feel, as they do, that that the old familiar ground of rulers by right of conquest is slipping from beneath their feet, it might be supposed that among Indian politicians at the other end of the see-saw there would be a feeling of triumph and jubilation. But on the contrary, the alarm and uncertainity here is as great if not greater than that prevalent in the bureaucracy.

Indian opinion can be classified as follows: There are the princes, the business men and large landowners, and the Congress Party. Most important of all there are the 300-odd million peasants living in 700,000 villages and struggling ceaselessly to keep above subsistence level. But these last have no opinion—as yet—beyond the general view that all government is oppressive.

The princes, who at first were intensely suspicious of federation and the new constitution, a suspicion which was exploited by the diehards in Great Britain who were opposing the government of India act of 1935, have now seen that the new proposals may save their skins, or at any rate postpone for a long time to come the abolition of a system whereby a prince can still rule his state in feudal splendor and irresponsibility.

Post Correspondent Sees Uncertainty In Delhi.

Congress Party's Propaganda Effective.

The Congress Party's propaganda is percolating into the states and many princes are asking themselves with anxiety what is going to happen when the frontiers of their autocratically governed domains march with those of the self-governing provinces of British India. From this menace the new constitution promises a refuge.

The princes who accede to federation will have a large measure of influence at the center and their conservative outlook and distaste for democracy will find at New Delhi congenial allies in the representatives of Indian capitalism—both in its industrial and land-owning aspects.

The Bombay millowners, together with the industrialists and large landowners in British India, not to mention the money-lenders, who are as essential a part of the Indian scene as the scavenging kites which float over every village, are beginning to regard with apprehension the probability of a rapid diminution in effective British control. From their point of view the British are now first and foremost brother capitalists and recognition of this fact is driving into the background the old complaint that the British were "alien invaders, grinding the faces of India's dumb millions into the dust."

This desire on the part of the capitalists to create an alliance between themselves and the princes to work the new constitution and so qualify in case of need for support from Great Britain, has been stimulated by the recent activities of that most attractive if revolutionary product of Harrow and Cambridge who is named Pundit Jawaharlal Nehru, the present leader of the Congress Party.

American Theater

By

William Lyon Phelps

1935-1936 Season.

The theatrical season now drawing to a close in New York is one of the best in American history; and yet it lacked the services of three of the best living American dramatists—Eugene O'Neill, Sidney Howard, and Philip Barry. Mr. O'Neill is writing a series of plays, some of which I hope and believe will be produced next season; Mr. Howard and Mr. Barry happened to have an off year and the two plays produced by them did not succeed. But even with the serious absence of these three, the new plays—both imported and native—gave such distinction to the metropolitan stage, and were produced and acted with such artistic splendor, that I do not believe any city in Europe had so many successful dramas. And by success I mean of course artistic success, though nearly all of these plays have been financial successes as well.

* * * *

There has never been a season where so large a proportion of plays have been actually worth seeing; that is, worth the time and the energy and the money that must necessarily be expended in visiting the metropolitan theaters. For example: during early April on the New York stage there were 33 regular theaters open. Two were musical comedies—a small proportion—and there was one circus and one variety show. This leaves 29 plays. Two of these were holdovers from the previous year; that leaves 27 new plays. Now of these 27 new plays regularly running in April, it is my belief that only six were insignificant or for some other reason not worth seeing. That leaves surely a remarkably high proportion of good plays.

* * * *

Tomorrow I shall print with comment my list of the best 15 new plays of the whole season from September to May.

But let me say now that the most dramatic moment of the year occurred on Saturday night, November 16, when at the close of the Theater Guild's production of "Taming of the Shrew," I went on the stage before a capacity house, Medal, awarded by The American and publicly presented the Gold Academy of Arts and Letters for the best diction heard in the theater, to the famous actress, Lynn Fontanne.

Text of Interview With Gov. Landon at Topeka

The text of the interview with Gov. Landon by H. V. Kaltenborn, as supplied to The Post by the Columbia Broadcasting Company, follows:

Mr. Kaltenborn: Good evening, everybody. This evening it is my very real pleasure and privilege to interview Gov. Landon of Kansas. I need not tell you that Gov. Landon tonight stands as the outstanding possibility for the Republican nomination for President, and I am particularly grateful for this interview because while I know that many of you have heard the Governor over the air in his previous speeches, there are many sidelights of a man's personality and his point of view, which cannot be revealed in a formal speech, and so here goes for the more informal question and answer method.

Governor, just who and what do you think will decide the coming election?

Gov. Landon: Mr. Kaltenborn, if the coming election is going to be genuinely beneficial to America, it should be decided by the common sense of the average man and woman, by the moderates among us rather than the extremists of either side. There are a great many of them—Republicans, Democrats and Independents—who know that certain things need to be done. They want the Government to play its proper part in meeting these necessities, but without wasting their substance or endangering their future. They would like to believe that a public man can be liberal without squandering their money.

When this great group of moderate thinking people make up their minds, the election will be decided.

Mr. Kaltenborn: Well, Governor, I would like to ask you a question that you may think is rather personal, but it is necessary to ask it because some people are really wondering whether you are going to be aggressive enough in speaking on public questions; that is, they wonder, if you should be nominated, whether you will make a real fighting campaign. How about it?

Governor Landon: Well, that all depends on how you judge a man. Some people judge a man by the amount of talking he does. Other people judge him by what he gets done. All my life I have divided people into two classes: One, the people who do things; the other, the people who talk about doing things. And I have tried to keep out of the latter class.

As to a fighting campaign, well, you never can tell how a "hoss" will work until you hitch him up. The returns of the last two Kansas elections might answer that question. I don't think anyone ever considered our political campaigns in Kansas pink tea affairs.

Mr. Kaltenborn: Well, someone has said that this forthcoming national campaign is not going to be a pink tea affair, either. Well, here is a more general question, Governor. What do you think is the greatest need of the American people as they face tomorrow?

Governor Landon: I believe the greatest need of the American people today is a revival of confidence—confidence in themselves and in their ability to work out their own problems. We find in almost every depression there are a certain percentage of people who lost confidence in themselves.

Finds Country Needs Revival of Confidence.

They begin to doubt whether they are really capable of getting out of the difficulty, and it is usually at this point that someone comes along with the idea of finding a superman and turning it all over to him. To repeat what I have said before, what we need most in order to go ahead in this country is a revival of confidence by the American people in themselves.

Mr. Kaltenborn—Well, if that is the way you feel about it, Governor, just how do you think we should go about restoring that confidence?

Gov. Landon—We have a Presidential campaign coming on, Mr. Kaltenborn, and contrary to some opinion, I believe that a Presidential campaign can be made a great means of public education, one that will inform the public and give the people a chance to study and understand what the real issues are.

Mr. Kaltenborn—I certainly agree with that.

Gov. Landon—You must realize that for three and a half years we have had only one side of the story. We have been up against the greatest political propaganda machine that this country has ever seen, and the worst of it is, it is being paid for out of the public treasury.

Mr. Kaltenborn—Well, Governor, what method would you use to get the people to receive a true understanding of what the real issues are?

Gov. Landon—First, I would enlist the united effort of all those people who have stopped to think what this Administration in Washington is letting us in for.

We must make these people appreciate that during the next six months this is the most important cause to which they can devote their time and effort. In planning our campaign, the issues must be made so simple and clear that every man and woman can understand them and be able to apply them to their own lives, their own future and, above all, to the future of their children. Then these issues must be personally carried to each and every voter in exactly those terms. If that is done, I haven't any doubt as to the results.

Mr. Kaltenborn: Well, let's get down to the Republican Party. What line of action should that party take?

Gov. Landon: Mr. Kaltenborn, the whole purpose of our party system is to be a means to an end. That end, as I see it, is good government. The Republican Party must prepare itself to be the instrument by which the American people can obtain good government. The Republican Party must again look forward, confident that there is in the American people the will and the intelligence to master our problems. Our party in the past has had the opportunity to be the servant of the Nation in that effort. If I rightly understand the spirit of our party today, it distinguishes between progress and mere change. It believes in the business of government that good intentions are not enough. Our high national ideals, the call for social justice, our goal of maximum individual opportunity for every man, woman and child in the land, are all being betrayed by a wasteful, slipshod, incompetent, happy-go-lucky Administration. The American people are being given half a loaf and charged for a full loaf. Progressive government deserves something better than casual experiment. It can succeed only when accompanied by careful preparation, competent administration and sound fiscal policies.

The Republican Party must go forward along sound and progressive lines, prepared to find all the solutions to the problems that confront us. No other course will do; no other ought to be considered. We should make it our object to restore a fair and decent opportunity for every man and woman who aspires to such an opportunity.

Sound and Progressive Policies Are Advocated.

Where humanitarian legislation is needed, we must provide it. Where labor and agriculture are under disadvantages, they must be removed. Where business is being hamstrung so that it cannot furnish goods or jobs, we must free it. We must insist upon equal rights for all; special advantages for no interest or group. That is simple justice. That is also the only way we can prevent the rise of class feeling, which I am sorry to see is being fostered in high places. Mr. Kaltenborn, anybody who tries to divide our people against themselves is no friend of America.

Mr. Kaltenborn: Well, Governor, that is certainly an interesting outline of your views as to the Republican Party. Now, let me ask you, what about the Democratic Party? After all, they have a part in the picture.

Gov. Landon: First, I want to make it plain that I do not regard the Administration at Washington as in any sense a Democratic Administration. Its whole method of procedure has been contrary to the historic principles of the Democratic Party. Certain of its objectives have been good, but its method of trying to reach them mostly bad.

It has acted too much on snap judgment, hastily throwing the measures together and jamming them through Congress without regard to the established American processes of government. The result too often has been that they don't get us anywhere that we want to go. That sort of administrative practice won't. To be specific, let's take the Administration's record in dealing with the depression.

Some people say we reached the bottom of this depression in the summer of 1932. The present Administration says we reached the bottom of this depression in the spring of 1933, when they came into power. Now, if according to their own statement they came into power at the bottom of the depression, there is only one direction we could move from that point and that direction would be upward. That was three years and two months ago. The Administration at that time asked for and was given unlimited power to carry out its plans. It had the whole country pulling for it. For example, in the State of Kansas as Governor I cooperated with it in every way possible. I felt that the Nation's interests came ahead of any partisan interest. I believe this was typical of the general attitude. In short, this Administration in the beginning had less opposition than any Administration that has ever been in power in the memory of living man, and now in all fairness I believe it is time for us to check results.

I just read a study by one of America's leading economists who has no political connection. He has looked into the facts and he finds the facts to be these: The present Administration has the worst record ever made in the history of the United States in bringing this country out of a depression.

Reckless Experiments Set Back Recovery.

Never before, once we reached the bottom, did it take us so long to get out of a depression, and our recovery is still unfinished business. After more than three years of unequalled peace-time grants of power in spending, millions of our people are still unemployed, one person out of every six is on relief, and the deficit is bigger than ever. Why? If you look into the facts of the situation you will find that on four different occasions since March, 1933, this country started on a definite movement toward recovery and on each of these four occasions it was set back again by some reckless experiment or disturbing move by the present Administration. How can we feel any confidence that this won't keep on happening? What this heedless retarding of recovery means to people out of work, to young people coming of age, is simply tragic. What the young people of America really need and earnestly desire is not relief but opportunity. I believe that the real issues before the American people today is not whether you are better off now than you were in 1933. The real question and issue is this: Have we made as much progress in coming out of the depression as you have a reasonable right to expect?

Mr. Kaltenborn: Well, Governor, let me shift the subject. I hear a lot of talk in the East about the possibility of prohibition coming back to the United States. Now a lot of people in the so-called wet States, knowing you come from dry Kansas, are anxious to know about the way you stand on prohibition, and several have made it a point to ask me to ask you just what is your attitude on prohibition.

Gov. Landon: I am glad you asked the question. I don't believe my position is misunderstood here in Kansas, and I don't want it to be misunderstood in any other States. We in this country had a long national debate over the wet and dry question.

The people rendered an overwhelming verdict that the question should be returned to the various States for such decision as their citizenry wished. I accept that verdict and I believe that it is up to each State to determine its own policy on liquor, subject, of course, to section 2 of the twenty-first amendment under which shipments into dry States are properly forbidden.

Mr. Kaltenborn: Well now that I have asked you one quesion that is being bruited about in the East, let me follow it up with another, Governor: What does Gov. Landon of Kansas know about foreign affairs? Now there is a question I have heard more than once. Now what about it?

Gov. Landon: Well, of course you understand, Mr. Kaltenborn, that we can't settle all the affairs of the world in one evening.

Mr. Kaltenborn: No, hardly.

Gov. Landon: But I might make the observation that there are certain principles which should be adhered to. We need common counsel and common advice, common action in this field particularly. The method is provided for under our Constitution, but too often we have neglected to use it. As you know, the power with respect to foreign relations rests largely in the Chief Executive, but he doesn't stand alone. The final control over the making of treaties is a responsibility of the Senate of the United States, not of a majority but of two-thirds of the Senators present. In this important regard the minority is given a voice. I believe in that, and in my judgment those Presidents who have been well advised have made it a practice to consult not only the Department of State and the majority members of the Committee on Foreign Relations, but the minority members as well.

Washington's Farewell Address Is Cited.

As to our relations with other countries, it might repay all of us to read Washington's Farewell Address again. I know it is said that the world has changed since Washington's time. It has. But common sense is still common sense. If you will read the whole address, Mr. Kaltenborn, all of the references to foreign policy, not just the one or two usually quoted, you will be amazed to see how far Washington's common sense applies to this modern age. I wouldn't say for a moment that we should slavishly follow Washington or anyone else, but I do say if we go forward in this spirit, we shall meet our obligations to America and the world.

Mr. Kaltenborn: Well, Governor, that is certainly a stimulating and interesting point of view.

Here is a good place, I think, to bring up another question. How should we be guided in the very difficult field of common regulation of business.

Gov. Landon: Mr. Kaltenborn, I believe we can lay down a broad principle here. There should be regulation wherever regulation keeps open opportunity and protects, not hampers, the people as a whole in the exercise of their rights. I am thinking of such things, for example, as the protection of childhood and of women in industry, of workmen's compensation, enforcement of sanitary conditions, compulsory safety devices on machinery, reasonable working hours, proper lighting and ventilation. Now if you will expand this definition to cover all sorts of antisocial practice, you will see what I am driving at.

Mr. Kaltenborn—Yes, think I do see what you are getting at, Governor, but I don't think what you have said so far completely covers what I have in mind by the phrase "business regulation." Would you develop that point just a little further?

Gov. Landon—Well, perhaps I can show you what I mean, Mr. Kaltenborn, if you will pardon a personal illustration, by taking a leaf out of my own experience. For most of my business life I was an independent oil producer. I brought new wealth out of the ground in the form of a raw product, then my problem was to market it. So as a small independent oil producer, I was always coming up against concentrated wealth in the shape of big oil companies, pipeline companies and railroads. Naturally, I became conscious of the problems of monopoly, of the power and tendencies of big aggregations of capital. I suppose, though it is human for a businessman to want to get into the position where he can fix prices and eliminate competition, perhaps by friendly agreements or the influence of size. He thinks it will make things easier for him, but my experience has convinced me that monopoly is bad for everyone, including business itself. Men in monopolistic positions aren't on their toes fighting; prices are fixed and maintained so high that buying power is shut off. If technical improvements are made, the profits aren't generally fairly passed on to labor and to the consumer. All the other groups outside the field of monopoly, particularly agriculture, are put at a disadvantage, and opportunity is closed to the small man. I believe we have got to attack the evils of monopoly frankly and resolutely and require the Government to keep a fair competitive system in force at all times. It will not do to think we can put monopoly on its good behavior and forget about it.

Have you read a book called "The Master Age of Monopoly?"

Mr. Kaltenborn: No, that is one I slipped up on.

Stresses Common Man's Commercial Liberty.

Gov. Landon: Well, the author of it speaks of something in America that we have got to save. He refers to it as the most precious principle in the system of private property, namely, the commercial liberty of the common man.

Mr. Kaltenborn: Getting away for a moment from these larger issues, Governor, a few moments ago in discussing business regulation you touched on various aspects of social implications in business, and that brings to my mind the question of social security. Now, have you any definite ideas along the lines of social security? I assume as Governor you must have come into contact directly with that problem.

Gov. Landon: Mr. Kaltenborn, I am for it! Every big industrial nation has had to move in that direction. In America we could once handle the problem pretty well by depending on individual thrift and family aid, local taxation and private contributions. These still have their place and a vital place it is. Some of the more progressive business enterprises have established systems of their own, thus having done some useful pioneering work, but I believe we have reached the stage where government must take a hand.

Now there is one really good point about the Administration's efforts in this direction: It did stimulate thought and arouse study along these lines, but the complicated legislation it rushed through in characteristic fashion will, I fear, prove to be unworkable in many respects.

We shall have to revamp it, and we must take care not to allow the eager desire to make a showing to lead us into the temptation of turning out something that will only be another delusion.

Mr. Kaltenborn: Forgive me, Governor, for jumping around the way I do but I want to get in as much as possible in this interview, and let me turn to something quite different. There is a phrase that has been current—"to make America over." Have you got any ideas with reference to that phrase or its implications?

Governor Landon: Well, it all depends on what you mean by making America over and who is going to do it? As for the Government at Washington, has the record lately justified our turning over the job to it? I hardly think so. But the thing that has made America over every generation is the individual effort, the ambition and the courage of our people and the feeling that individual opportunity was open to everyone. These are still the fundamentals. There are no workable substitutes for them.

I do not mean that we should not be open-minded to change. We are a practical people. We have learned to do a great many things to advantage by pooling our mutual interests. Some of them are familiar to us all. Our farmers and our labor unions have found that cooperative action often enables them to improve their situation, but cooperative enterprise is entirely different from a planned economy mapped out by a lot of bureaucrats ruling from Washington. This kind of a planned society is the sort that has developed under European dictatorship. I do not believe we want anything of that kind over here, for this type of centralized plan is based on the idea that the American citizen is not able to take care of himself and that he requires some man who must tell him what to do and what not to do. I still believe that the American people under proper government protection would like to plan for themselves.

Urges an Overhauling In Handling of Relief.

Mr. Kaltenborn — Yes, perhaps they would, Governor, but of course there are some who can not plan for themselves, and I am thinking of those on relief, and from some of the things you have previously said I judge you have some ideas on the relief problem and on the relief set-up.

Gov. Landon—Yes, I have, and I don't think I am alone in that conviction. I think we have got to have an overhauling. The first thing that ought to be done is to find out what the requirements actually are and what is wrong with the present set-up. Let us have the truth about it, whatever it is. The people are entitled to know the facts about these enormous expenditures of their money; not that we begrudge what is necessary, but we want it properly used. When we have the facts, we must provide an honest and effective relief system, administered so that the money will go to those who need it and deserve it, free from political strings. We must make relief honest and nonpartisan, but that alone is not enough. The waste in human values is worse than the waste in money values. We must have a change in the attitude and policy that will give encouragement to the person trying again to become self-supporting, and here let me say again that all this continuous experimenting and piling up of one uncertainty onto another keeps business upset, holds back undertakings that would bring more jobs, for more jobs is the only real solution to the relief problem—jobs that will allow people to keep their self-respect and plan for their own and their children's future.

Mr. Kaltenborn, there is no future on the relief roll. But to me the most deplorable thing about the present set-up is the way in which it has been made a matter of wretched party politics. In my opinion, relief should be above politics. It is a matter of fundamental Christianity, and let me say here and now that I, for one, am dedicated to the proposition that henceforth no American citizen shall ever again be put in the position where he must sell his vote for bread.

Mr. Kaltenborn: Thank you, Gov. Landon. I see that our time is getting short and that is the last question I will be able to ask. Well, I think, Governor, you and I have made history tonight. I can't think of any better way than we have developed here tonight to show issues clearly, by getting direct answers to direct questions. After all, that is the way in which American political history is made. Here we have done some radio pioneering and some political pioneering, too. I believe it is the first time an outstanding Presidential candidate has ever been interviewed so the whole country could listen in.

I see over your desk, Governor (and I looked up at it once or twice while we were talking), a picture of Abraham Lincoln, and it occurs to me that he would approve of this method of carrying to the American people the opinions of those men who are outstanding before the people in connection with our political life.

Thanks again, Governor, and good night.

New Deal Blow In Two States Claimed by Foe

Fletcher Cites Maryland, Pennsylvania Votes and Predicts Victory.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Fletcher of the Republican National Committee said last night he interpreted the results of primary elections in Maryland and Pennsylvania as a "jolt" for the New Deal.

"Exaggerated claims of Administration leaders of certain victory in the coming November election and that every State in the Union would be found approving the New Deal policies got a jolt in Democratic primaries just held in Pennsylvania and Maryland," he said.

"The results are highly encouraging to those who desire to re-establish American ideals of government and are disconcerting to the New Dealers and causing dismay in their ranks.

"An unusual thing has taken place in American politics. Against a President supported by every element of the organization in these two States, aided by millions of Government funds, poured in to make the going easy, a gallant candidate who knowing he had no chance to win, but running solely to give members of his party a chance to register a protest, backed by no organizatoin, with no funds, has rolled up an amazing vote."

Mr. Roosevelt was opposed in Maryland and Pennsylvania primaries by Col. Henry Breckinridge.

Charges Broken Faith.

Fletcher asserted the circumstances in these two States demonstrated that "millions of clear-thinking Democrats will not follow one who has broken faith with his platform and his party traditions." The figures, he added, proved a constantly increasing trend against President Roosevelt.

"The same ratio of opposition throughout the Nation," he said, "would assure us of carrying 15 States with a total of 224 electoral votes, which voted for Mr. Roosevelt four years ago. Added to these the States voting against Mr. Roosevelt in 1932, and certain to do so again, we have 283 electoral votes, which are more than enough to insure his defeat.

"This, of course, is a minimum. Other border States unquestionably will join in this repudiation of the Roosevelt program. The forces of Americans having for their common purpose the restoration of sanity in government, can take great encouragement in this demonstration of political independence."

S. Dakota's 8 to Landon.

Sioux Falls, S. Dak., May 7 (AP). This State's eight delegates to the Republican National Convention were counted in the column of Gov. Alf M. Landon tonight on the basis of nearly complete unofficial returns giving his slate a majority of 973 over Senator William E. Borah's in Tuesday's primary.

Returns from all but 47 of the 1,958 precincts showed a total vote of 42,702 for the Landon-pledged group which was listed on the ballot as uninstructed. The delegates for Borah, an avowed candidate, received 41,729 votes.

Rules Change Hinted.

Philadelphia, May 7 (AP).—Pennsylvania Republicans were reported in political circles today as prepared to launch a movement at the Cleveland convention next month to amend party rules so State chairmen automatically will become members of the Republican National Committee.

Business men active in party affairs were reported back of the move, although none would acknowledge the plan originated with him.

Joseph N. Pew, of Philadelphia, a delegate at large, described the idea as "intriguing." He said he thought "it would help make for a more cohesive party."

San Francisco, May 7 (AP).—A total Democratic vote more than one-third greater than the Republican was disclosed today in closing tabulations of the California Presidential primary.

Russian Troika To End Season; Grove to Open

Countess Loney Innovations Click at Maryland Club Gardens.

By Chanticleer.

The sad news broke at the Russian Troika yesterday. Impresario Helen Hamilton announced the final revue will be staged—the last tureen of borscht served—on the 28th. Then the merry crew packs up its bags and heads for the beaches and the mountains until another October rolls around.

Staff to Stage Farewell.

And you should know that after all the guests have departed that night the Troika begins its own family party. The staff—musicians, entertainers and all—remain almost unchanged from beginning to end of the season.

* * * *

How to go ahead in the after-dark business: A month ago Countess Loney came to town to visit with Maryland Club Gardens' Mrs. Stamm. As the visit went along the countess became intrigued with the cabaret business and she made little suggestions which seemed to click. Days and weeks passed and the Loney innovations were approved by the guests—and the countess' knowledge of European foods and wines added a little different touch here and there. Now the countess finds herself an indispensable part of the Gardens' big family. And she's consented to stay indefinitely.

Warren Boden, the genius of the banjo, at the Shoreham this week, is strumming his way into great favor, being blessed with personality as well as an ability to make music on his Alabama guitar. Don't forget that next Monday is the night of the Lace Ball at the Shoreham, for the benefit of the Homeopathic Hospital. Meyer Davis will be on hand to lead the band.

Brooke Johns Barn Open.

Brooke Johns Barn is open again. One of the first things to impress you about that barn is the realization that it really was a barn and that some remarkable work has been done on it. The original rafters, floors and roof are preserved and set off with what must be scores of soft amber lights. Verra, verra nice atmosphere in all.

You'll find Moe Baer in the Rainbow Room at the Hamilton. Drop in and see him. Just like seeing that old college roommate and all that sort of thing. This is Moe's first public appearance, so to speak, since last we saw him at the Club Habana a few weeks ago. Russ Cullen is vocalizing as before. Dancing for cocktail hour and supper.

Dick Hummer makes all his own arrangements, speaking of bands. Hummer is now at the Dude Ranch. One of the band's novelties, by the way, is an imitation of the leading theme songs known to the radio public.

Opening for that new Coconut Grove is just a week off now. It will be located at Fifth and K streets—lots of parking room. The Grove primarily will be a restaurant, open from late afternoon until 2 a. m. There will be two big floors and a 14-piece orchestra for dancing, however. The capacity is 600 persons, so you never feel you have to stand around waiting for Mr. and Mrs. Zilch to leave before getting seated. The decorative motif, of course, is palm and coconut trees—a Tropical Garden.

There's a trace of a tear in Ol' Massa Pete Macias' eye these days. Despite the fact that Maestro Macias and his orchestra will reappear in a couple short weeks or so at the Powhatan roof, the closing of the Heigh-Ho Club for the summer recess has its sad moments. Meantime, he wishes me to pass along his appreciation of the support you citizens gave the Heigh-Ho this past winter and an invitation for the opening next fall. But—one last word—you can help with the fadeout either tonight or tomorrow night. And the tap room is to hold its doors open throughout every hot summer day.

Night Club Notes.

The Government was well represented Tuesday night at the La Paree with dignitaries, particularly from Attorney General Cummings' staff, on hand. And just for good measure, a Governor and a Senator.

It's summer right now at the Embassy Tap Room. The waiters have gone into some brand-new attire in keeping with the approaching warm days.

Down at Brinkley's, the cat has come out of the bag. Mac, who leads the orchestra, has identified himself also as a crooner.

It's another Lady Mei show at the Lotus, with the Mei-ettes on view in ensemble and solo dance numbers. The La Fons, Grace Orlando and Lenora Thall provide the specialty bits. And, of course, the Capitolians for your dancing.

Familiar Figures in the Supper Clubs This Week

On the Air Today

The doors swung open—and in charged the 600.

Mostly friends they were of the company sponsoring the program, but nevertheless appreciative of the opportunity that has come once in several years locally to see Rudy Vallee and his variety show go on the air.

Possibly some of those who contribute to the success of the big air show, week in and week out, also were among those admitted before the Press Club auditorium doors swung shut at 6:50 p. m. yesterday, but if they were it was by the grace of the National Broadcasting Co.

It is not difficult for me to recall the press notices sent to radio writers in 1928, I believe it was, advising them frankly that a new entertainment personality was to be built by means of radio.

The artist's name was Rudy Vallee. The newspapers of the country helped to build that name and to keep that name before the public. The sponsors of the Vallee program today count on the newspapers to apprise the radio public of the details of the program.

But the tickets for the Vallee broadcast—ah, yes, those tickets. They are distributed by another fellow. Not the one who sends the publicity material.

So—if you were among the friends of this desk who asked help in seeing the show of the star we have helped to develop, just remember that this stuff about the press being recognized is a sad illusion. Your groceryman is the fellow to call on next time. He has the ducats.

* * * *

And with your kind indulgence in these two chronicles, yesterday and today, I promise I shall not bother you with references to the Vallee "Varieties" for many months to come!

Water Under the Bridge.

Baltimore, May 7.

Four miles south of the heart of Baltimore's crowded business section stands star-shaped Fort McHenry, so designed that each of its angles protects the other . . . It stands on the very tip of the city, only its terraced battlements restraining the huge cannon from sliding off into the blue waters of the Patapsco River, which converges here before emptying into Chesapeake Bay.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY.

It was the heroic defense of this fort, on September 13, 1814, that inspired Lawyer Francis Scott Key to pen the greatest of all American song hits, "The Star-Spangled Banner," and, incidentally, prove himself to be a grand reporter.

* * * *

The song could have been distilled only in the heart of an intensely patriotic man, and Key's patriotism was made touchingly articulate by the dreamy, poetic nature which was his heritage from his mother . . . What manner of man was he? He was 35, an aristocrat, a famous lawyer, and he had sailed down Chesapeake Bay on September 2, right into the British fleet to effect the release of his elderly friend, Dr. Beanes.

* * * *

Beanes had been imprisoned after the British sacked and burned Washington . . . Francis Scott Key, a flag of truce over his tiny boat, put out from Baltimore on September 2 to win his release from the British admiral . . . Key's eloquence won the day, but the two were detained as the British prepared to attack.

* * * *

On Sunday, September 13, 1914, a forest of masts choked Chesapeake Bay as the British wheeled into position . . . Fort McHenry was easily distinguished. An American flag, 36 feet long and 29 feet across, flew from the towering flagstaff. This was the flag that Francis Scott Key saw during the fight. It had been sewed by a Baltimore widow, May Young Pickerell.

* * * *

Throughout the daylight hours of September 13, the 30 attacking ships poured blistering shot at the fort, defended by 1,000 men under Maj. Armistead . . . You can picture Key as he strained his eyes toward shore while the ships lurched from the recoil of the big guns . . . All day he stayed at his post, watching the huge flag snapping in the strife-torn winds . . . At midnight, exhausted by the roar of the guns, he went to sleep, a troubled, depressing sleep . . . At 6 he rushed back to the deck, and the first two lines of his song were nothing more than expert reporting.

* * * *

"Oh, say can you see by the dawn's early light, what so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming?" . . . The flag.

* * * *

It is beautifully worded, this poem which he composed from a full heart:

"On the shore, dimly seen through the mists of the deep—where the foe's haughty host in dread silence reposes, what is that which the breeze, o'er the towering steep, as it fitfully blows, half conceals, half discloses? Now it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam, in full glory reflected now shines on the stream" . . . And then the triumphant conclusion: "'Tis the star-spangled banner—oh, long may it wave o'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

* * * *

A few hours ago I saw the manuscript of the song, as Key wrote it in pen and ink. It is in Walter's Art Gallery . . . He wrote it or rather recopied it on the back of a sheet of yellow letter paper, as soon as he got back to Baltimore . . . It is probably a letterhead from the Fountain Inn, where he and Dr. Beanes found lodgings after their ordeal . . . His handwriting is evidence that his poem flowed easily.

* * * *

In the first line: "O, say, can you see through the dawn's early light," Key scratched out "through" and substituted "by" . . . In the third verse he crossed out "they have washed" and substituted "their blood has washed out" . . . His handwriting is small and almost feminine . . . the full-bodied "O's" and "A's" indicate his generosity. . . . The sharply stroked exclamation points hint at his courage and decision . . . The flourishing, upward curling tails of his small "D's" do not fit in with the rest of his handwriting, or perhaps that is the poetic strain expressing itself.

* * * *

You feel a choke in your throat, and a strange, electrifying thrill up and down your spine as you stand at Fort McHenry and look down the bay and down the aisle of the years. Brave, picturesque men dissolve from the mists of the lower Chesapeake and you can fancy them performing heroic deeds. The feeling re-asserts itself and you seem to be looking over Key's shoulder, as he wrote in the flickering candlelight of a Baltimore tavern.

* * * *

But, then, I guess I'm an old softie . . . I'm still old-fashioned enough to think that the "Star-Spangled Banner" has never been equalled for sheer, breathless beauty . . . For this is my own, my native land, and I'm naively proud of it.

British Failure To Cite Rhine Worries Nazis

Omission From Questions for Locarno Powers Held Suspicious.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 7.—The German foreign office, studying a British questionnaire on Adolf Hitler's suggestions for European peace, expressed surprise and suspicion tonight over the absence of queries on Rhineland fortifications.

The questionnaire, prepared by the British Government on behalf of the remaining Locarno powers, was handed to the German government today.

Although the complicated document contained a broad inquiry into Der Fuehrer's April 1 proposals together with a request for a more precise statement on Germany's colonial demands, the questionnaire dropped completely all interrogations on German forts in the reoccupied Rhine zone.

(Hitler proposed as a counter-suggestion to the London Locarno accord, establishment of a three-man international commission to supervise the Rhineland during a four-month "armistice" period, during which peace negotiations would be carried on.

Commission Neutral.

(The commission would have one English and one Italian member who would name the third. Germany would agree not to increase her forces in the re-occupied territory, but France and Belgium would also have to make the same guaranty.)

The problem of fortifications with British and French anxiety over what the Nazi chancellor intended to do in the Rhineland was once considered as the backbone of questions formulated by Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary.

The Wilhelmstrasse, therefore, reliable sources said, was searching for a reason why this question was eliminated and was inclined to take a pessimistic view that something lay behind the move which might not prove too good for Germany.

The government suspected that the French and the British may be contemplating re-erecting the Stresa front with Mussolini, a spokesman declared, and so they let the Rhineland fortifications query, rest until the time when Germany begins to erect barricades.

(The Stresa front—a union of Great Britain, France and Italy—was formed to consider the rearmament of Germany after Hitler began the reorganization of his military machine.)

Violation May Be Claimed.

With the Stresa front functioning again, it was said, the three nations could seize upon the construction of German border defenses as a violation of article 42 of the Locarno treaty (which forbids Germany to build forts) as distinct from article 43 (which was the original prohibition against German troops in the Rhineland.)

Questions on the equality of Germany as compared to other nations were considered by informed sources as an attempt to pin Hitler down regarding his intentions against Austria, the free city of Danzig, Memel and Czechoslovakia.

Reliable sources asserted the questionnaire asks the ticklish question of whether Hitler now considered he has obtained all the victories he needs to bring Germany to full equality with the other major nations of Europe.

Official quarters believed that either a yes or no answer might play into the hands of their opponents.

Sources which usually were reliable said the government was not optimistic about starting negotiations soon and a long, extended exchange of views might be expected.

The French Socialist-Communist election victory, it was said, was regarded as a blow to the Nazis, for France's new government was not expected to give any quarter to the third Reich.

Officials declared a study of the questionnaire would require considerable time and the document would not be published at present.

$1,400 Netted At Coolidge's Effects Auction

By the United Press.

Northampton, Mass., May 7.—The household furnishings of former President Calvin Coolidge brought slightly more than $1,400 to his widow at public auction here today.

Although Auctioneer George H. Bean refused to make public the total amount grossed, an unofficial compilation of the individual sales disclosed the aggregate.

While the auction still was in progress, Attorney Ralph W. Hemenway, Coolidge's former law partner and now counsel for his widow, said Mrs. Coolidge "probably" would give the proceeds to charity.

Prior to the auction, both Hemenway and Judge Henry P. Field, in whose office Coolidge studied as a law student, characterized the 400-odd articles Mrs. Coolidge has found she no longer needs, as a "bunch of junk." The former First Lady now is traveling in Europe.

Calls It Disgraceful.

"The only persons that go to auctions," said Judge Field, "are old women. They wouldn't miss an auction of a funeral for the world. I think this auction is disgraceful. I know Mrs. Coolidge didn't think there would be all this publicity about it."

Field was not among the 400 who attended.

Hemenway was there but he bought nothing. "Where would I put it?" he asked. "If I were furnishing a summer camp, it might be all right."

Mrs. Margaret C. Little, of Geneva, Ill., thought differently. Descendant of Charity and James Harrington, first settlers in that mid-western town, she came on here just for the auction.

Prepared to Pay High.

A sorely puzzled woman, Mrs. Little said she came prepared to pay much more.

"You see," she explained, "we want to use it when our town—Geneva—celebrates its hundredth birthday in June and July of this year. I'm chairman of the historical society there, but, for the life of me, I can't understand why you Easterners let things go so cheaply. We place a much higher value on them out West."

The dining room furniture Calvin Coolidge and Grace Goodhue purchased when they set up housekeeping at the now-famous two-family house on Massasoit street was knocked down to Mrs. Edna Bowles, of Northampton, widow of United States Representative Henry Bowles, of Springfield.

She bought the set for $28 to give, she said, to a family in Northampton which lost their furnishings in the March flood.

Many of the larger pieces were purchased by Lewis N. Wiggins, proprietor of Hotel Northampton. He plans, he said, to open a Calvin Coolidge memorial room at the hotel.

Young Bureau Head Set Trap for Mahan

San Francisco, May 7 (AP).—Capture of William Mahan was made here under direction of one of the youngest Department of Justice Bureau chiefs in the service, Wayne L. Listerman, 28, in little more than four years has served as bureau chief in Buffalo, N. Y., Trenton, N. J., and San Francisco. He came here from Trenton last January.

After graduation from Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, he took a legal course at the University of Cincinnati and at George Washington University, intending to become a lawyer. The criminal-catching business lured his interest instead.

He became an assistant in the Department of Justice under J. Edgar Hoover, and interested himself particularly in methods of work in the difficult kidnaping cases.

House Unit Queries Hoover on Autos

By the Associated Press.

A House Appropriations subcommittee has handed J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, another mystery to solve—why his Federal Bureau of Investigation bought 86 new cars when it didn't have the money to pay for them.

The sub-committee called Hoover up to Capitol Hill.

"You have a world-wide reputation as an investigator," said Chairman Buchanan (Democrat), Texas, during hearings on the deficiency bill. "How did this thing happen?"

Hoover said he had been advised last June by the general agent and chief clerk that some money was on hand and an order was placed for the 86 cars.

"Do you make any attempt to keep an account of your obligations?" Buchanan asked.

"We are now," Hoover replied.

Group in House To Inspect Two Reformatories

To Query Superintendents Today Before Making Tour of Schools.

A special sub-committee of the House District Committee today will question superintendents of the National Training School for Boys and the National Training School for Girls preparatory to making a personal inspection tour of the institutions.

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the sub-committee, stated yesterday as the hearing opened on the Norton Juvenile Court bill that the sub-committee will inspect all institutions to which children are committed by the District Juvenile Court or the Board of Public Welfare.

Claude Jones is head of the National Training School for Boys, and Dr. Carrie W. Smith is superintendent of the National Training School for Girls.

Proponents of the bill to change the local Juvenile Court from a criminal tribunal to a chancery court opened the hearing yesterday.

Charles La Chute, executive director of the National Probation Association, explained the purpose of the measure and said that opposition to it was based on a misunderstanding.

"Plenty of safeguards are provided in this bill to protect all constitutional rights of both children and their parents," he said. "Children do not need a jury trial and no good juvenile court in this country provides it."

Wilbur LaRoe, jr., chairman of the committee on civic affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches, said his organization has indorsed the bill. He predicted that enactment of the bill will reduce the number of felonies committed in the District.

LaRoe, who is chairman of the District Parole Board, said:

A plea for a modernized Juvenile Court was made by John E. Laskey, former United States attorney for the District; Owen Lovejoy, of the American Youth Commission, and Alice Nudge, of the Children's Bureau of the Labor Department.

Edith Maxwell's Appeal Set June 2

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Norton, Va., May 7.—The appeal of Edith Maxwell, 21-year-old former Wise County school teacher, for a new trial will be argued before the Supreme Court June 2, according to the court docket prepared and released by J. M. Kelly, clerk of the court at Wytheville.

Six attorneys are listed on the docket to present the Maxwell appeal from the 25-year prison sentence given the young girl by a jury in Wise County Circuit Court for the murder of her father, Trigg Maxwell.

All six have previously figured in the case—R. P. Bruce and W. W. G. Dotson, of Wise; A. A. Skeen, of Clintwood; M. J. Fulton, of Richmond; Charles Henry Smith, of Alexandria, and Miss Gail Laughlin, of Portland, Me.

Attorney General A. P. Staples or one of his assistants will represent the Commonwealth.

Judge Skeen had denied all motions for a new trial made by defense counsel, but the State Supreme Court of Appeals, in granting a writ of error a few months ago, decided to review the case.

Baby's Intelligence Is Cited in Job Plea

Richmond, Va., May 7 (AP).—A Former teacher in the Richmond public schools who left her job prior to the birth of her baby, used a claim that the child was abnormally intelligent as an argument to get herself re-elected, Superintendent J. H. Binford said today.

The school board's rule is that teachers must retire four months prior to the birth of a child and cannot apply for re-election until the child is a year old.

One teacher, attempting to get the rule waived, presented a psychiatrist's affidavit to prove her 8-month-old baby was 1 year old mentally.

Citizens Favor Playgrounds' Fund Increase

School Board's Five-Year Plan Is Debated by Northeast Group.

The Northeast Conference of Citizens Association met last night at the Twelfth Police Precinct station, endorsed a motion to increase playground appropriations in the District of Columbia and postponed a vote on endorsement of the school board's five-year building plan.

Fourteen delegates, representing the 12 associations in the northeast district, were present to hear debate on the five-year plan, and to endorse the playground proposal.

In an effort to eliminate what they termed a "shame because children have no place to play in the afternoons," the association unanimously approved a motion by Mrs. W. H. Mertz, representing the Trniidad section, to endorse a Senate appropriation of $10,000 to keep playgrounds open, with supervisors in charge, throughout the district.

The delegates voted to indorse widening of Twenty-first street from East Capitol to Maryland avenue northeast. The motion called for making Twenty-third street conform in width to Maryland avenue.

Alfred D. Calvert, vice president, presiding at the meeting in the absence of President A. F. G. Scheer, relinquished the chair to oppose a motion to indorse the School Board's building plan. However, the motion—after debate lasting half an hour—was withdrawn to allow members further time for consideration of the building proposal.

Also indorsed at the meeting were petitions to present at tonight's meeting of the School Board for building of a school on Mount Olivet road northeast, and a proposal for increased playground facilities in the Trinidad section of the city.

Little Entente To Keep Unity, World Is Told

3 Balkan Nations Lecture Austria and Oppose Hapsburg as King.

By the Associated Press.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, May 7.—The Little Entente served notice on the world today that it was sticking together and was prepared to "expend its last ounce of energy" for its basic principles.

Foreign minister of the entente, composed of Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Rumania, announced that these principles would be determination to maintain Austria's independence, unalterable opposition to a Hapsburg restoration in Austria, maintenance of the present frontiers of central Europe and respect for military clauses, existing treaties and the League of Nations.

Austria was lectured in a communique read in the presence of the foreign minister. It said the Treaty of St. Germain, which includes military restrictions allegedly violated by Austria in the introduction of compulsory military service would henceforth be respected.

The entente refrained from saying it would take any measures for the steps already taken by Austria.

It stated, however, that if there were any more deviations from treaty provisions the entente "retains the liberty" to institute appropriate action.

The same attitude, the communique said, applies to the treaties of Trianon and Neuilly respecting Bulgaria and Hungary.

The entente expressed the wish the Locarno powers would preserve the collective security idea and said there was no change in its relations with Germany, France, Poland and Russia.

Pacifists Told To Alter Stand Against Wars

'Something Worse Than Conflict,' Church Delegates Hear.

Delegates representing 33 Congregational Churches that recently voted overwhelmingly against war were urged in conference here yesterday to be reserved pacifists.

"There is something worse than war," the Rev. Dwight Bradley, Boston pastor, declared before a session of the Middle Atlantic Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches in the First Congregational Church.

"A pacifism that leads to chaos is worse than war that brings to pass, even though only temporarily, somewhat more of order," he said.

"What is involved is the issue of international order as opposed to chaos, and at stake is the principle of justice. The church should be crying out for justice and order.

"If justice should seem to hang upon the outcome of bloody war, it would be not only craven, but immoral for the church and its clergy and its laiety to withhold support from those who fight for justice in arms."

Warless World "Visionary."

The pastor in a spirited forum after his address declared it was "visionary" to contemplate a warless world at the present time. Congregational churches in a plebescite last November voted to work unstintingly for peace.

"The Italian-Ethiopian conflict is evidence that we have not yet outgrown wars for colonial expansion. It looks like Japan is just beginning such a war, and Hitler in Germany may be about to push out for new colonies."

The social action committee, reporting yesterday afternoon, urged all churches to show concern over "the social tragedy in the impossibility of 'ife, liberty and the pursuit of happiness' for many in a denial of the 'abundant life' Jesus desired for all to share."

It recommended, however, no specific action. Social action this year will be placed entirely in the hands of the local churches, the Rev. Clifford W. Collins, of New Jersey, chairman of the committee, said.

Mission Era Closed.

At a meeting of men delegates last night Dr. Fred Field Goodsell, executive vice president of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, said the era of colonial missions is closed.

"The Fellowship era of world-wide Christian effort has begun," he declared. "Evangelical Christianity is becoming a world force. The last 15 years have witnessed great progress in the growth of self-reliance and self-determination among idigenous churches. The goal is a world federation of Evangelical Christian churches in which the Christian movement in each nation shall play its well-organized part."

Mrs. Mattie R. Brown, of East Orange, N. J., is expected to be elected superintendent of the conference at business sessions this morning. Her election was recommended yesterday by the board of directors of the organization. She will, if chosen, be the first woman to hold the office.

The annual meeting is expected to adjourn this noon.

Fashion Show Tonight.

Girl Reserves of six high schools of Washington will hold a fashion show today at 7 p. m. at the Y. W. C. A. buildnig following their monthly club supper. The girls who will model include Alice Fracker, Mary Sisson, Rosalie Fahey, Miriam Blackwell, Marjorie Stockett, Dorothy Wallace, Sybil Street, Harriet Frankhauser, Lucy McNeeley and Martha Moss.

Capital Leaders Will Join Jewry In Temple Fete

Washington Congregation to Begin Celebration of Anniversary Tonight.

Prominent Washingtonians of all creeds will attend the celebration of the eightieth anniversary of the Washington Hebrew Congregation at the Eighth Steret Tabernacle tonight. The anniversary sermon will be preached by Dr. Leo M. Franklin, rabbi of the Beth El Temple, Detroit, who will take as his topic, "The Jew's Dilemma."

The paths of Dr. Franklin and Dr. Aram Simon, rabbi of the Eighth Street Tempe, have crossed before when Dr. Simon succeeded Dr. Franklin at Temple Isreal, Omaha, Nebr., when the latter was called to Detroit. Dr. Franklin, like Dr. Simon, takes an active interest in civic affairs in his own city, serving as a member of the boards of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, Detroit Public Library and Detroit Civic Theater. He has the distinction of receiving an honorary doctorate from the University of Detroit, a Jesuit institution, in recognition of his work in creating a more sympathetic understanding between Jews and Christians.

Services will start at 8 o'clock tonight and a prominent group of Washington's Jewry will take part in the celebration. Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, assistant rabbi of the Temple, will read the service; Dr. Simon will introduce Dr. Franklin and will pronounce the benediction; Mrs. Fred Pelzman will speak for the Sisterhood; Allen V. DeFord for the Brotherhood; Samuel S. Kaufman for the Young People's League, and Wallace Luchs, jr., for the Pi Tau Pi.

Officers and members of the board who will have a part in the celebration are Jacob H. Gichner, president; Dr. Bernard A. Baer, vice president; Chrales B. Dulcan, sr., Harold H. Levi, Edmond I. Kaufman, Adolph Kuntz, Louis Ottenberg, Henry J. Goodman, Emanuel R. Haas, Sidney L. Hechinger, Harry J. oeb, Jesse I. Miller, Harry Sherby, Morris Simon and Milton Nathan.

Music for the services will be furnished by the temple choir and by the newly organized volunteer choir. A reception and refreshments will follow the services.

Organized in 1856, before the war clouds of the Civil War, the Washington Hebrew Congregation had the distinction of being chartered by Congress. President Pierce, who had invited Judge Judah P. Benjamin to become an associate justice of the United States Supreme Court, approved the charter.

From a modest beginning the congregation has grown to be the largest in the Nation's Capital and has welded wide influence in every civic movement looking toward the present minister, Rabbi Abram Simon, recently celebrated the thirty-second anniversary of his pastorate here. He is nationally known as a civic leader, orator and ecclesiastical scholar.

Bar Association Members Guests at Stimsons' Party

By Francesca McKenney.

The members of the American Bar Association, who are meeting in Washington this week, were the honor guests at the garden party given yesterday afternoon by the former Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson on the lawn of their beautiful estate, Woodley.

Yesterday's party was the first large garden party of the season and many of the guests were gowned in soft, floating, flowered chiffons, while many others preferred printed silk frocks of street length.

On the wide rolling lawn were bright colored marquees where large buffet tables were placed with tea cakes and various flavored ice creams. Small tables were also on the cool green grass, where many of the guests sat in small groups enjoying the refreshments.

The Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes arrived early in the afternoon and held a court of their own throughout the length of their stay. Mrs. Hughes also chose a black and white printed gown and a black straw hat. The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hunt also arrived early in the afternoon. The latter wore a dark blue frock trimmed with white and a hat to match.

Among the members of the diplomatic Corps who attended the party were the Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye, the Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson y de Jauregui; the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter; the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted, the latter in a black gown with a large straw hat trimmed with gardenias, and the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi.

Van Fossan, the former United States Ambassador to France and Mrs. Walter E. Edge, and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, the latter in an aquamarine frock with a wine-colored turban trimmed with a small veil.

The Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

Lace, spelled with a large "L," has insinuated its filmy self into the social picture of the moment in connection with the approaching Lace Ball Monday. At tea tables and bridge parties lace is a talking point and many recall the part this feminine article of adornment has played in the fashions of the Washington of today and yesterday.

The gallery of paintings of First Ladies at the White House and the actual gowns worn by them as shown in the Historical Costumes Collection at the New National Museum display lace used in many ways.

Rare lace is that exhibited in the cases of the Corcoran Gallery of Art, part of the famous William A. Clark collection, some of the pieces being of great value.

Among the private collections of lace here are those owned by Mrs. Larz Anderson and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Washington women, who have added to their stores on their world-wide travels. When blonde-haired Princess Boncompagni the former Margaret Draper, daughter of the Ambassador to Italy and Mrs. William F. Draper, was in Washington last winter she frequently wore some lace treasure from the beautiful collection left her by her mother. Many remember Margaret Draper at her debut ball, a lovely figure in eighteenth century court costume, with yards and yards of rare lace adorning the extremely wide, full skirt of her gown.

A feminine trait of our woman minister to Denmark, Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of the late Secretary of State and Mrs. William Jennings Bryan, is shown in the enthusiasm with which for many years she has collected lace on her world travels. The Honorable Ruth is an expert on laces as well as many other things.

The new National Musuem is fortunate in its possession of rare laces in the collection of the historical costumes formerly owned by Mrs. Julian James, grande dame of the Washington scene for many years, and some of the famous laces owned by Lady Johnstone, sister of former Gov. Gifford Pinchot.

Among other Washingtonians who have enviable collections of laces are Mrs. Anne Archbold, Mrs. Frank B. Noyes, Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, Mrs. Henning Jennings and Mrs. Sumner Welles. The latter inherited hers from her mother, Mrs. Richard Townsend, long a leader in Washington society.

Should Bride Give Up Her Job For Housework? That Depends

Authorities on Marital Success Are Inclined to Agree That She Should Let Mate Be the Breadwinner, but There Are Exceptions.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

SHOULD the spring bride give up her job and let her husband be the moneymaker for the new household? Or should she hold on to her monthly pay check after marriage and add jam to the bread and butter her mate can provide?

Hope R. Miller.

Yesterday these questions were put to three authorities whose work repeatedly touches on this subject of marital success. Two—Miss Beulah E. Smith and Dr. Elmer Klein—are connected with the Washington Life Adjustment Center; the other, Miss Alice Edwards, is executive secretary of the American Home Economics Association.

Each admitted at the outset that answering these questions is difficult; that formulating fool-proof rules would necessitate interviewing every couple Cupid has headed toward the altar this spring. "But on the whole, I would say if the husband is capable of supporting a home, even in an extremely modest fashion, it would be better if the spring bride would give up her job," averred Dr. Klein, a psychiatrist whose business it is to point out ways in which the individual can become better adjusted to his surroundings.

"Homemaking is a fulltime job, particularly in the first months of married life," he went on, "and the bride who makes this her chief work will lay the foundation for the type of household that helps any marriage succeed." An attractive and gracious home is as important to the average woman's happiness as it is to a man's, Dr. Klien believes. "So certainly, until her household is organized and runs smoothly, it would be better for her to concentrate on it, rather than to divide her interests and energy between it and a job that is purely a wage-earning proposition."

Problem Complex.

If the bride is a professional woman whose activity outside the home provides a channel of self-expression she never finds in domestic duties, the problem is a more complex one, according to Dr. Klien, who further pointed out: "In cases of this kind the two persons concerned probably will work out the problem before they marry, and carry out the solution in an intelligent manner, in keeping with what one would expect of any woman with the ability to carve a career for herself in a keenly competitive world. But, generally speaking, the girl who has been merely a wage-slave before marriage would do well to give up her job for at least a year. Later, when some of the glamour and romance wears off, she may again find employment outside the home, if she feels she would be happier."

Miss Smith believes the problem has as many solutions as there are prospective brides and bridegrooms. "Some women will welcome the opportunity to work at home; others are better adapted to work for wages and could never be happy in purely domestic pursuits," she said. "I am a firm believer in wives (or husbands, for that matter) working when and where they choose. If each husband lets his wife do as she pleases about this business of homemaking or wage-earning, chances are she will be happier, and in the long run, he will be, too."

The wide-spread belief that wives extremely competent in making money send their marriages on the rocks finds little favor with Miss Smith. "It isn't the wife's paycheck that sometimes makes her husband feel inferior and eventually pulls marital bonds apart, it is the wife's behavior about her work, her salary, her contribution to the family income. If she is high-handed about her ability, if she assumes a superior attitude and looks down on her husband from the lofty heights of her business success, his pride will suffer, with the result the marriage may eventually end in Reno. But, if she appreciates her husband and his problems, if she makes him feel that whatever success she has is partly his, he won't resent her making money, even if her salary is as much, or even more, than his."

Miss Edwards, looking at the problem of the wage-earning wife versus the homemaker, believes the latter has a better chance to make a distinct social contribution to her community.

The problem is not a matter of a wife's choosing between puttering over pots and pans in one's kitchen and "expressing oneself" in some job outside the home, she said, "but is, rather, a matter of the wife's recognizing whether she has the ability to make her home a haven for her husband and herself—a place where one might find rest, stimulation and inspiration, as they are needed.

Depends on the Wife.

"Whether home-making is a fulltime job for a wife depends entirely on her faculty for seeing the possibilities in it," she continued. "While I admit some women lack this ability and can, therefore, make worthier contributions to their family welfare by working for a salary, I do believe a husband can forge ahead further and more quickly if his wife makes his career hers and helps him by creating a comfortable, pleasant home and by devoting her attention to his welfare and his problems. "Perhaps, if more women were interested in furthering their husband's careers than in building their own, there would be more successful marriages. In view of this, it seems to me the spring bride whose husband can support her would profit by giving up her job."

New Oil Softens Skin and Shooes Away Those Oncoming Middle-Age Wrinkles.

By Mignon.

The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.

ONE TIME, some years ago, I went to a beauty parlor and had a treatment with a very thick oil which was calculated to make a dry skin soft. It did the work, too. I always thought the idea was a fine one, but the price of taking the treatment didn't make me half as happy as the results it brought.

I have now found an oil with a delicious and rather pungent odor, as thick as molasses (in summer), crystal clear, and of a very slightly yellow color. It is one of the most marvelous skin softeners I have ever discovered.

I don't know whether or not you would call this oil expensive. I don't, and the reason is that it takes so little of it for a treatment that it seems to last indefinitely. If you are at the age where lines and wrinkles put in their appearance, it is an excellent idea, after creaming your face at night, to put a little of the oil under your eyes, on the lines that run from the nose to the corners of the mouth and under the chin where middle-age lines are always in such a hurry to accumulate. You can fool these lines if you try hard enough before they get set. It doesn't take much time, but you must be regular in applying the oil. Don't do it one week and then forget it for three. I think you are going to be delighted with this product.

Children Need Mud to Play In; Protest Useless

They Prefer Sticky Mess to Cleaner Sand; It Has Greater Appeal.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"Why do the children insist on playing in the mud? There is the whole beach for them to dig in, and lately we have had a sand pile put in the yard. It does no good. The minute there is a rainfall they are back in the earth digging ditches."

Mothers and nurses have, and quite excusably, an aversion to mud. It is dirty, and it sticks, whereas sand will brush off and leave no smears. And it is just this sticky quality which attracts the children. Mud and sand are no more interchangeable than sugar and butter. No one would try to mold sugar into shapes, but butter stays as it is put.

One cannot build satisfactory dams or ditches or even make good pies and puddings out of sand. The beach is necessarily a somewhat limited field of action. But mud lends itself to all kinds of engineering and domestic occupations, and the child who never has played with it has missed not only lots of fun, but also a part of his education.

There is a great deal to be learned from the various combinations of earth and water. Nothing shows better the growth and development of river, mountains, valleys, the effect of dams, the action of floods, than rain on earth. The road becomes a miniature watershed, and displays all the characteristics of a large one. The child who has watched the streams and played with them, changing their courses and experimenting with dams and levees, has learned an important lesson in physical geography.

One way of saving clothes and effort is to dress him in his bathing suit or overalls and let him go out in the rain and play in the mud. The warm rain of summer will not hurt him any more than would a swim in the ocean. He can be rinsed off with the hose or a pail of water before he comes back into the house.

Paris Uses White Crepe For Summer Dresses

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Should a girl of 18 be allowed to come home at any hour of the night?' And what should a mother do when her daughter says, "I am 18 and will do as I please?" The girl I refer to (a niece of mine) pays no board at home, but buys all her clothing. Her mother does everything for her comfort, including acting as her seamstress.

When the girl goes to a dance, her mother believes she should be home by 2:30 a. m. at the latest. The daughter, however, says she will be home when she gets home. When she goes to a show or club meeting she is expected home by 12:30, but instead, she wants to park an hour or so. Do you think it is decent for a girl to pet with every boy who takes her out?

* * * *

My heart aches for this mother, as she has given this girl every possible liberty and now feels the girl is taking advantage of her. Do you think it advisable to tell her escort she should be home at a certain hour? The mother fears this parking is going to lead to trouble. What is wrong with young people of today? Don't they ever think how it looks to come dragging in at all hours?

* * * *

If the girl was able to support herself, the mother would force her to make a choice between remaining at home or going elsewhere to live if she continues her late hours and reckless days. Her mother does not wish to countenance actions which she is sure will get her daughter into trouble sooner or later. Please give us your advice. Yours truly.

WORRIED AUNT.

Take Cold, Hard Stand.

DEAR WORRIED AUNT: When a girl tells her mother, "I am 18 and will do as I please," her mother can do one of two things. Either she can say with complete and cold finality, "Very well. Do as you please. But when and if you get into trouble from doing as you please, be prepared to get yourself out of that trouble as best you can. From now on, I wash my hands of any and all responsibility for your actions." Either she can say this, and thereafter adopt an attitude of utter disinterest in her comings and goings, or she can take opposite tactics, namely these:

* * * *

She can say: "Don't deceive yourself, my child. This is my home, and while your are living here, you will subscribe to my ideas of what constitutes decent and respectable conduct. You will either be home at such-and-such a time, or you can begin now to look about for some other roof to which to return before dawn." Needless to say, there are few if any landladies who would long tolerate as members of their household an 18-year-old girl who failed to regard such conventional proprieties.

* * * *

If I were this mother, I would take a cold, hard, definite stand, one way or the other and let this girl know that if she is wading into water which is over her depth, figuratively speaking, she is doing so entirely at her own risk; that her mother is not hovering frantically on the sidelines, agonizingly awaiting the time when she will have to do the life-guard act; that the girl is definitely on her own.

* * * *

It might be a good idea, also, for the girl's mother to talk to each of the girl's beaux, in turn, and tell them just what she has told her daughter. Let the beaux understand that mother is not standing between them and the possible consequences of foolishly unconventional conduct. She may say to them: "My daughter is a headstrong, disobedient girl who seems to be determined to get herself into trouble; and, if she gets herself into trouble with you, that is her lookout and your lookout, not mine. I have pleaded with her and I have warned her. Now I am warning you. And if you have a grain of common sense, you will watch your step."

* * * *

I realize this advice sounds hard-boiled and unorthodox; that it is not the usual sympathetic "let there be mutual understanding here" counsel. But I am taking it for granted the mother has long since exhausted every reasonable means of attempting to deal with the situation. In giving the daughter every possible liberty, undoubtedly she acted on the assumption that her daughter owned good faith and good judgment and was capable of appreciating courtesy and fair play and responding in kind.

Incidentally, I should be much interested in having the opinions of other mothers as to how best to deal with this situation. M. H.

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART

By Priscilla Wayne

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

Jim's answer was a most emphatic return of the kiss and a tightening of his arms about her. "Exactly that, my sweetheart. June, dear," his voice had become unexpectedly serious. "June, dear, there's just one thing. I don't believe that I can ever be happy until I know the answer, until I'm sure of the answer."

"I must know the question, dear, before I can answer." But even as she urged, Ruth dreaded to hear what the man she loved might ask.

Jim held her very close, sat without word or motion. Then, "Dear, sometimes I think that I was very selfish, that I was very wrong—"

"You couldn't be selfish—"

But Jim hushed the torrent of her words. "Sometimes I think that I was very unjust and very selfish to hurry you into this marriage. You're younger than I am. I can't be sure that you love me—"

"I do love you. I do love you, Jim."

"Hush, dear. Let me talk. I hurried you into this. I wanted you—more than anything I've ever wanted in all my life, and because I loved you so much I wanted to make sure that you'd be safe and happy if—if anything happened to me."

"And you call that selfish? Oh, Jim dear."

"Yes, I call it selfish because right down in my heart I knew I was going to get well, sometime, somehow. Oh, darling, when I loved you and you loved me then I had so many reasons to get well. Don't you see, dear?"

Ruth held his hand very tightly. "And yet you call yourself selfish, Jim, dear."

"Then, darling, we'll never mention it again," he said at last. "I love you so much that nothing else matters—with you I could face—even blindness."

"I'll never leave you, never leave you, Jim dear," she whispered.

Jim made plans. Wonderful, radiant plans for their future.

"We're going to take our trip, darling. Two months, three, four, as many as you like, and then we're coming home."

"Not home as you know it, dear. But another home. A home we will build for ourselves and our children.

Ruth sat silently. Though Jim did not know it, her eyes were filled with tears.

Jim went on and on with his radiant plans. "And after our honeymoon, sweetheart. I'm coming home and go to work."

"Work?" Ruth could not restrain the impulsive question.

"Yes, dear, work. Handicaps amount to little these days, dear, if a man has determination and ambition. It is true that I do not need to work, financially, true that I could manage our money and help it accumulate. But I wouldn't like that very well. Would you?"

He did not wait for Ruth's answer. "My dad was a self-made man, you know.

"He made his fortune with his two hands and his alert brain. And he had a grand, good time doing it.

"There are things we can do with our money, dear. Great, wonderful things. Dad planned a hospital. In memory of my mother. He was about to launch his plans when he died. She died when I came into the world, you know, June."

"Many a time when I was a little boy she told me that sometime he meant to endow a great hospital dedicated to my mother to help women and babies. Too many young mothers die. Too many babies go through life motherless.

"Science has done much in other lines of health and human safety, but in all the centuries science has lagged in this one.

"We can carry on, dear. We can build dad's hospital. We can live a big, beautiful life together. Nothing dare hold us back, nothing dare handicap us."

"I have news for you.

"You remember Bette, the maid who disappeared when the Bradleys did? Well, she did not go with them. She's is Chicago—came to my office and told her story, which substantiates yours in every particular."

"I'm glad," said Ruth, "for Bette's sake that she's free of Clara Bradley."

Ruth sat down quickly. She dreaded to hear what the "something" might be. About Jerry? Always in her worries over her plight, Jerry's plight in the background. "My brother?"

"No, Jim's sister."

"You mean the real June?"

"Yes. She's on her way here from New York right now.

"And we must tell Jim?"

"Yes, right away. I had hoped that maybe you had told him this morning."

"I tried. Honestly I tried."

"I've talked with the doctor. He says that Jim is much stronger. He says that if we tell him quietly and don't make very much fuss over it, the shock will not be too great."

"I'll go away," Ruth said at last. 'I should never have been a party to this deception. I'll go back home."

"No, dear," Robert Reagan told her firmly. "That isn't the way to do—to run away from your worries—when Jim has had his little nap, you're going to walk right in there and tell him the truth."

Chinese Divorces, On Increase, Seen Women's Victory

Nanking (AP).—Champions of women's rights see in the increase in Chinese divorces the dawn of a new era of freedom for the weaker sex in a land where, from earliest times, marriage has been a "life sentence."

A direct result of the modernization of China, most of the 448 divorces granted by Chinese courts last year were for residents of the coastal provinces, where foreign influence has been strongest.

The figures give further evidence of the revolt against the old order of matrimony which forced young couples to live with and be subservient to parents, for third on the list of causes of divorce is "maltreatment by relatives." Maltreatment and desertion led the list.

Diplomas Planned For British Debs

London, May 6.—Debutantes who attended the two Buckingham Palace garden parties this summer, in lieu of formal court presentations, will not have to suffer doubts that they have been officially presented.

Certificates of presentations are to be made available if desired, a sort of social diploma which can establish social standing.

The fact that the garden parties are being held within a court mourning period will place particular emphasis on these certificates.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Pain means trouble somewhere in the body. It is nature's alarm system. Were we not provided with nerves of feeling (sensory) no one of us would survive for long. There would be no signals warning us of danger. What a state we would be in were we completely anesthetized and at the same time conscious!

There are many times, however, when we would gladly give up—at least temporarily—all of our nerves of sensaiton, for agony indescribable attends some types of illness or injury. Then it is that powerful drugs—narcotics and anesthetics—come to our relief.

Pain Is Bewildering.

But pain is bewildering as we cannot—at all times—interpret its meaning. Furthermore, it is elusive and does not always appear at the seat of the disease. If a toe aches the chances are that the difficulty is in that region. While the pain of appendicitis may be disclosed by pressure on the abdominal wall over the appendix, yet it may be much more noticeable in the stomach area. In fact, the most pronounced symptoms may be nausea and vomiting and all the signs of a digestive upset. Headache may denote any one of a score of disease processes—referred from the intestines, the ovaries, the sinuses, or the brain itself. A severe frontal headache sometimes follows a single swallow of ice cold water.

Whenever gallstones become so large that they block the passageway leading into the intestine, the symptoms may not be located in the neighborhood of the gall bladder. The patient may seek medical aid because of a violent pain in the right shoulder boring through to the back.

Heart distress may simulate acute indigestion, or it may be transmitted to the left shoulder and down the left arm to the tips of the fingers. Commonly called angina, this is one of the most agonizing symptoms to which the body is subjected, and the chest may feel as though it were gripped in a slowly tightening vise.

Symptoms of neuralgia or sciatica are transmitted along the nerves, although the trouble in the first instance may lie in a distant nerve center or depot (ganglion). In facial neuralgia the soreness is often localized in the jaw and perfectly good teeth have been extracted needlessly. Toothaches may point not only to the diseased structure, but to normal teeth that lie adjacent.

Cancer Painless at First.

One of our popular misconceptions, which has little or no basis in fact, is that kidney disease is attended with backache. In the first place, the kidneys lie behind the abdominal cavity well up in the body, and the upper portion of each organ is covered by the curve of the lower ribs. Furthermore, kidney disease as such does not cause pain. This symptom may develop, however, if a stone from a kidney attempts to pass down the tube (ureter) leading into the bladder. This may be so intense as to be prostrating.

Pain from arthritis, cancer, and diseases of the bone will usually be felt at the site involved.

Improving Your English

WHAT A FRIEND—and what an enemy—our speech can be. It makes strangers accept us in spite of our shabby clothes or humble beginnings. Or it marks us as well-meaning nobodies, no matter how we try to please.

There's Cleo, in our sketch, striving to be pleasant to her neighbor, Mrs. Archer. Such a charming, cultivated woman. Cleo will be bitterly sorry if they don't become friends. Yet what is she saying to the astonished stranger?

"I live just ACCROST the street from you, so I FIGURED we OUGHTA get acquainted," twitters Cleo. "Sure, I'll ACCEPT OF a cup of tea. I like tea any time and ANYWHERES. I used to drink it UNBEKNOWIN to my mother when I was a KID."

All very well meant. But how can Mrs. Archer ever invite Cleo to meet her cultivated and polished friends? Cleo simply "won't do" as long as she uses incorrect English.

How strange that many girls who wouldn't wear an old gingham apron out on the street will cling to speech habits twice as offensive and out of place as the dingy apron!

It's just a matter of will and persistence to become a good talker. Our 40-page illustrated booklet, COMMON ERRORS IN ENGLISH, will point out to you slips you might not notice for yourself. A few minutes a day of practice will give your speech distinction, and no longer let it proclaim you a careless nobody.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Common Errors in English," to Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Airport Site Report Goes Over to 1937

House Members Score as Summer Hearing Plan Is Dropped.

Senator King Is Elected Head; Representative Nichols Secretary.

The District airport site commission, holding its organization meeting in the Senate District Committee room at the Capitol, late yesterday decided that it would be impossible to file its report with Congress before adjournment.

While the decision was not unexpected, some members had clung to the hope that a site might be found speedily because of the abundance of testimony on proposed sites previously taken by Congressional committees.

Senator William H. King, of Utah, was elected chairman of the commission in an executive session, and Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, was chosen secretary.

House members won an initial victory when they persuaded the Senators that the commission should not hold summer hearings, as suggested by Senator King. The Representatives explained that it would be impossible for them to remain in Washington on account of their election campaigns.

Sub-Committee Named.

A sub-committee of three was set up to formulate a plan of procedure and an agenda for the commission. Its first meeting was scheduled tentatively for next week, and it was instructed to report to the full commission within two weeks.

As explained by Nichols, the sub-committee will, first try to answer the question: What kind of an airport does Washington need?

The suggestion that the commission first determine the character of the airport to be built before selecting a site was made by Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the Army Air Corps.

Size Important Factor.

It was explained that the size of the airport will have much to do with the choice of a site, and the question of whether it is to be used by seaplanes as well as aircraft will be a vital factor in the location.

All but one of the nine commissioners were present at the first meeting. The absent member was Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York.

Those present were Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission; Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan, District Engineer Commissioner; Representative Mary T. Nolan, chairman of the House District Committee; Representative Sterling Cole (Republican), New York; Senator Austin (Republican), Vermont; Senator King, Gen. Westover, and Nichols.

Worker Killed Under Wheels Of Backing Bus

Accident Occurs in Garage of Transit Company; 3 Permits Revoked.

Edward A. Crawford, 66, a mechanic in the Capital Transit Co. bus garage, 2112 Georgia avenue northwest, was killed instantly yesterday when crushed beneath the wheels of a backing bus.

According to witnesses, Crawford, who lived at 9309 Montgomery avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., was knocked under the wheels of the heavy vehicle when he walked behind it while it was backing into a parking stall at the garage.

The driver, A. W. Rubeck, told police he did not see the man. If Crawford's death is termed a traffic fatality, it will raise the District total to 35 for the year.

As one way of curtailing the number of fatal traffic accidents, J. Borton Weeks, Keystone Automobile Club national president, last night told a meeting of 1,500 members all new highways should be of the dual type, with center separations to protect motorists.

The club adopted an 11-point platform, in which it opposed mandatory semiannual inspection of all District cars for mechanical defects, proposing instead a larger number of roving squads to clear the streets of unsafe machines.

Another platform plank opposed any increase in the existing local gasoline tax, unless present revenues prove inadequate for highway improvement. The organization protested against diversion of gasoline taxes to other purposes.

Meanwhile, Othel W. Lamp, 41, of 1211 North Capitol street, was exonerated of blame of striking Robert W. Armentrout, 5, of 1130 Fourth street northeast.

Three motorists lost their driving permits and 22 others had their licenses suspended for periods of from 15 to 30 days yesterday when the revocation board acted on the cases of 25 drivers convicted of speeding.

Those whose permits were revoked are John M. Brown, 121 Thirteenth street northeast, 55 miles; Mark E. Chapman, 600 Twenty-third street northwest, 50 miles; Frank W. Bufford, 5305 Dorsey place northwest, 50 miles.

Thirty-day suspensions went to Alvin Z. Baker, 45 New York avenue northwest, 44 miles; Albert M. Benton, 2322 Ontario place northwest, 40 miles; James J. Breen, 1406 Buchanan street northwest, 42 miles; Fanny E. Buck, 1228 I street northwest, 42 miles; Bruce Chandler, 3422 N Street northwest, 46 miles; George A. Crawford, 800 Kennedy street northwest, 45 miles; Joe Davis, 715 Seventh street northwest, 42 miles; Melvin S. Decker, 121 Twelfth street southeast, 40 miles; Sidney C. Deloach, 1507 V street southeast, 44 miles; William G. Eickhoff, 2619 Fourth street northwest, 35 miles, second offense; John W. Emerick, 908 Fourteenth street northwest, 40 miles; Mathew J. George, 1125 Potomac avenue southeast, 48 miles; Moses Ginsberg, 729 Quincy street northwest, 42 miles; John M. Gott, 5308 Fourth street northwest, 40 miles.

Fifteen-day suspensions went to George E. Barnes, 154 Yuma street southeast, 38 miles; Fred Berardi, 1722 North Capitol street, 38 miles; Thomas J. Crowell, 42 V street northwest, 38 miles; John J. Foley, 1309 Corbin place northeast, 38 miles; William Graham, 109 Webster street northwest, 35 miles.

Camera Ban

On Street Photographers Rejected by District.

Proposal by commercial photographers, that the Commissioners enact a special regulation prohibiting operations by so-called candid camera men on the city streets was rejected by the District Commissioners yesterday.

The candid camera operators stand on the streets, taking photographs of pedestrians as they approach and hand the persons photographed an order card.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, reported there had been some complaints against the camera men. There is no regulation specifically forbidding them to operate and they can be arrested only if they make nuisances of themselves, he said.

"If they can be arrested if they make a nuisance of themselves then I think we've got all the law we need," Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said in announcing the Commissioners' action.

Bovine 'Sleepy' Belies Name, Hunts Green Pastures in City

Alumna of Soldiers' Home Dairy Escapes From Truck on Way to Baltimore, Giving Urbanites of Capital Thrill of Lifetime.

There was no pasture and very little grass around, but Sleepy—she's a dead cow now—half clambered and half slid from the truck which was taking her to the slaughter house yesterday afternoon, lumbered down Franklin street northwest and headed for the wide open spaces while dozens of little children and several yelping dogs who'd never seen a cow tagged along behind.

But Sleepy's attempt to escape from the truck came to a bad end. Sleepy—a spotted black and white Holstein with a contralto mooing voice—used to graze on the grass of Soldiers' Home dairy and gave good grade A milk before she grew too old. Sleepy went on a rampage yesterday.

She was being taken in the truck to the Baltimore slaughter house. For a while she had been acting as any contented cow should, standing very bovinely and peacefully in the truck, complacently chewing her cud.

But as the truck whizzed by Franklin street she decided the green looked greener out there. And she suddenly became a discontented cow. She slid from the truck and broke into a bouncing run. She beat her hoofs against the pavement, dodging autos and street cars.

Children of all ages, strolling and chattering home from school, heard the strange noises and turned in amazement. They saw Sleepy running down the streets as if she was prancing on the green turf of a pasture far out in the country.

City children don't get to see cows—not often. Asked one tousled-haired boy of another as they ran to see the animal:

"What's that?"

"Why, don't you know?" the other lad responded. That's a cow—a real she-cow."

Down the street they ran and shouted after old Bossy.

"She was getting too rambunctious," he explained. "I hated to do it, but I had to run into her and break her leg. She might have hurt somebody."

Then little Betty Jane Miller, 12, also of 812 Kennedy, came out to solace the cow.

"Poor, poor, Bossy, did they hurt you?"

Bossy was taken to Baltimore soon after.

Stores Helping Fund Campaign For Boys' Club

Work of Youths Will Be Displayed in Windows; $135,000 Sought.

Checks and cash continued to pour into the Willard Hotel headquarters of the Washington Police Boys' Club drive for an expansion fund of $135,000.

Today's program will include a continuance of business firm solicitation, radio appeals, the opening of Boys' Club exhibits in the windows of six downtown department stores and the showing of a movie "trailer" at five downtown theaters.

The motion picture, made in the office of Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown, explains the work of the clubs in lowering juvenile delinquency and promoting youth welfare and voices an appeal for the fund, which will provide several additional clubs and permit establishment of a summer camp.

So far colictiors have concentrated on a canvass of the city's principal business establishments. During the coming weeks, emphasis will be laid upon an appeal to individuals, who are invited to become associate members of the clubs.

A feature of yesterday's program was the broadcasting last night of a "typical Boys' Club night" at the Fourth Precinct Club, 472 I street southwest. The unrehearsed program included a description of boxing bouts, harmonica band selections and other activities.

Woman's Poison Death Is Declared Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald after an autopsy was performed on the body of Mrs. Maxine Mela, 42, who died Wednesday night in Providence Hospital. Mrs. Mela was found unconscious on the front porch of her home here, 1934 First street northeast, Monday night after her husband, Alvin S. Mela, had reported her missing.

Coroner MacDonald said the post-mortem operation disclosed Mrs. Mela had consumed a quantity of poison.

Mooney Counsel to Speak.

John F. Finerty, counsel for Tom Mooney, will speak tonight at the Capital City Forum, 1502 Fourteenth street northwest, at 8:15. His subject will be "California versus Mooney."

Jay Walking, Anti-Noise Rules Face Allen-Sultan Fight Today

With two of his colleagues on record against the proposed new traffic regulations prohibiting blowing of automobile horns at night and jay-walking in the downtown area, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen is to bring the proposals before the Commissioners again today for action.

Both were laid aside at a meeting attended by Hazen and Col. Dan I. Sultan, engineer commissioner, last Tuesday. Commissioner George E. Allen is expected to vote against them today, along with Col. Sultan.

The anti-horn blowing regulation is to be submitted with an amendment. As submitted by William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic and chairman of Hazen's anti-noise committee, the regulation forbade blowing horns of private vehicles between 11 p. m. and 7 a. m. for any purpose. That was proposed because present regulations forbidding horn blowing except as a reasonable warning are violated constantly, Van Duzer said.

He has agreed since to have the new regulation amended to permit blowing of horns of private vehicles in cases of extreme emergency. Such cases are not to be defined.

The jay-walking ban is to go as proposed, or be rejected.

House Managers Leave Conference Abruptly; Experts Called.

Shouts and Pounding on Desks Audible; Levy Here Held High.

The District tax rate and the Federal lump-sum payment yesterday proved the first snag in the Senate-House conference on the local appropriations bill.

House managers left the parley rather abruptly following a short session yesterday afternoon, and the Senate conferees called in three tax experts. It wats said that no further meetings will be held until Wednesday morning.

Before the earlier conference broke up, reporters could hear shouts and sounds of pounding fists on a table. Neither Senators nor House members would discuss what went on, however.

Clashed On Funds Slash.

While it is not likely that any change in the District tax rate is contemplated, the conferees are believed to have locked horns over the House slash of $3,000,000 from the Federal contribution of $5,700,000 recommended by the Budget Bureau and voted by the Senate.

After the House managers had left, the Senate sub-committee was closeted with L. H. Parker, Congressional tax expert, who drafted the report submitted to the Senate sub-committee by the Washington Board of Trade; Fred D. Allen, District tax assessor, and William P. Richards, former tax assessor.

Both Senate and House conferees, it was understood, desired to recess to gather more data in support of their contentions.

D. C. Tax Rate High.

The sense of the Parker report was that Washington on a per capita basis pays one of the highest municipal tax rates of any city in the country. Even when State and county taxes are included, the report pointed out, the per capita tax rtae is the highest in the South and very high in comparison with Northern cities.

Members oft he House sub-committee on District appropriations asserted on the House floor that Washington's tax rate is one of the lowest in the country in attempting to justify their reduction in the lump-sum payment.

Although the Senate conferees in recent years have yielded to the House in the Federal contributions issue, they contend this year that they wil stand firm as their figure has the support of the Budget Bureau and President Roosevelt himself.

House Building Boom Predicted by Loan Aid

League to Lend Billion in '36 for New Homes, Bodfish Says.

Morton Bodfish, young executive vice president of the United States Building and Loan League, said yesterday that he expects a house-building boom in 1937.

Bodfish, stopping briefly here while en route from Chicago to a convention of building and loan men at, Rocky Mount, N. C., said that the building boom must come next year because of the present "rising rents, little vacancy, and the nonproduction of houses for the past six years."

"This boom," Bodfish said, "should be a substantial factor in recovery but improved activity in other industries is necessary if we are to absorb our present abnormal unemployment."

The league has assets of $6,500,000,000, representing 80 per cent of the total assets of all 11,000 associations. In 1932 the league borrowed from the RFC a sum substantially over $100,000,000. It has since repaid approximately 94 per cent of that amount.

Billion in Loans.

"One of the great mistakes of our public thinking," he said, "is its failure to appreciate thrift and to reward it properly."

"Too much emphasis and hope has been placed on the thought that building alone would bring complete recovery," he added.

Bodfish, a recognized expert in the field of land economics, has been executive manager of the United States Building & Loan League since 1930.

He was appointed by President Hoover in 1932 as a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and served until Roosevelt took office March 4, 1933. At the time of his appointment he was only 30 years old.

Ohio State Graduate.

Bodfish knows both the practical and theoretical sides of the building and loan business. After graduating from Ohio State University in 1924 he worked for two years in Columbus, Ohio, as a contractor.

Financed by building and loan associations, he built 26 houses in Columbus. "I could get a job now as a carpenter," he says.

He took his master of arts degree at Ohio State in 1926 and taught there for a year in the Bureau of Business Research. He then joined the faculty of Northwestern University as an instructor in land economics and is now an associate professor there of that subject.

Bodfish has made two trips to England to study the methods of operation of public and private building and loan associations, but considers that "we have home ownership in this country that surpasses anything in the world."

"The desire for property has probably been the outstanding impulse in the settlement and development of our country," he said.

The first building and loan association in this country was started in Frankford, in northeastern Philadelphia, in 1831. Since then the business has grown until at the present time there are 11,000 associations in the country, 4,300 of which are members of the United States Building and Loan League.

Wife of Capital Socialite Gains Decree at Reno

Husband, F. M. Tompkins, Pleaded Guilty in 1935 Traffic Death.

Francis M. Tompkins, 28, young socialite, whose father is Charles M. Tompkins, prominent Washington contractor and real estate man, was divorced at Reno, Nev., yesterday by his wife, Mrs. Adair Childress Tompkins, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

Last December young Tompkins, who lives at Chesterbrook, Va., pleaded guilty to manslaughter in connection with the death of Mrs. Ruth Storey, killed March 2, 1935, when his car crashed into the loading platform on which she was standing at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

At the time of the accident Tompkins was alone in the car of a woman acquaintance whom he had taken to her Southeast home after an hour or two with her at a night club, it was revealed in the investigation of the accident.

After pleading guilty to the manslaughter charge, Tompkins was remanded to the District Jail while his case was studied by a probation officer. Later District Supreme Court Justice F. D. Letts imposed a fine of $1,000, which he paid and was released.

According to the dispatch from Reno, Mrs. Tompkins was awarded her decree on grounds of cruelty. Mrs. Tompkins is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Childress. It is understood that the couple have a son. They were married in this city on May 1, 1931.

Education Board To Hold Hearing

The public tonight will get one of its semiannual opportunities to make its wants known to the Board of Education.

Representatives of citizens' associations, Parent-Teacher groups and other civic organizations will meet with the board in the assembly hall of Franklin Administration Building for a hearing on school needs.

Preparatory to making its budget for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, the board will hear all requests for new schools, school additions and improvements, more adequate grounds and additional teaching force. These suggestions will be noted and later considered when the board drafts its budget.

Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, president of the board, will have charge of tonight's hearing, which will begin at 8 p. m.

The board meets at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon to conduct business which was postponed Wednesday when the members recessed in tribute to Dr. Hayden Johnson.

P. U. C. Moves To Cut Rates Of Gas Again

Issues Notice of Public Hearing; August Date Believed Likely.

Engineering, Accounting Investigation Is to Be Launched.

First step toward another downward revision of gas ates in the Distict was taken by the Public Utilities Commission yesteday when it issued a fomal notice that it would hold a public hearing on the question.

No date has been fixed but it is expected to be some time in August. It will be preceded by an engineering and accounting investigation in conformity with thep rovisions of the sliding scale arrangement governing future rates of the Washington and Georgetown Gas Light Companies.

The agreement, fought to adoption by William A Roberts, people's counsel, and made effective a few weeks ago by the commission and the companies, reduced the then existing gas rates by approximately $850,000. The new rate schedules now in effect are estimated to reduce the total of gas bills of consumers generally by about $305,000 below the old rates, less the discount which had been put into effect by the commission for more than a year before the new rates were approved.

No forecasts as to the amount by which current rates may be reduced were available. Figures on which to base estimates will not be available until after the engineering and accounting investigation has been completed.

Under the sliding scale agreement the company is entitled to earn 6.5 per cent on its valuation. The arrangement also provides for annual adjustment of the rates by September. Despite lack of detailed figures, preliminary examination of the books of the companies has convinced cammission experts profits have been sufficiently high to justify a further reduction in rates, it is said.

Mask and Bauble Club Will Compete Tonight

Georgetown University's Mask and Bauble Club will compete in an intercollegiate one-act play contest at 8:30 p. m. today in Gaston Hall at the Hilltop. The contestants will include the dramatic clubs of Fordham University, New York City; St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia, and St. Peter's College, Jersey City, N. J. Local dramatic critics will act as judges.

During the previous years, in which the four schools have contested, St. Peter's College has won three times. If it wins again tonight it will keep permanent possession of the trophy cup.

'Good Earth' Halts Waiting For a Guffaw

Paul Muni Finally Serves as the Provocation; Hollywood Items.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, May 7. — Sidney Franklin, directing "Good Earth," has found a new use for Paul Muni's face—it makes Chinamen laugh.

Risibilities of the Muni visage were exploited with great success for portly William Law, a big shot in San Francisco's Chinatown, but a problem child to the movies.

Law, an executive of the "Six Companies," and an officer of the Chinese "Native Sons of the Golden Gate," turned actor and technical adviser for the picture. Unfortunately, although he is expert at presenting Chinatown to the tourist, he doesn't savvy acting, and can't produce chuckles at will.

He plays mojor - domo of the wealthy house of Lu, where Muni a poor farmer, comes to claim his bride (Luise Ranier). Law is required to give Muni the horse laugh as a hick.

Couldn't Laugh and Talk.

"Well," said Franklin when they came to that point, "go ahead, laugh."

"But I can't laugh," protested Law. "I see nothing funny here."

"Then think of something funny," urged the director.

"Oh, very well, I will think of how Muni came through the door with Miss Ranier behind him in the last take. To me that was exceptionally comical."

They tried it again, but there was no spark for the Chinese.

"No use. It no longer seems funny," apologized Law.

"I'll make him laugh," volunteered Muni.

He strode through the door with his back to the camera and screwed his features into a series of outlandish grimaces. Law grinned from ear to ear, then laughed till he held his side.

"Cut," called Franklin sadly. "The laugh's okay, but why didn't you speak your lines?"

"So sorry," gasped Law. "When I laugh I can't remember lines."

A comic opera "war" between M-G-M and Warner Brothers' studios is over, and Clark Gable is minus his mustache. Warners borrowed the star to play a prize-fighter, and demanded he shave the upper lip. Metro then ultimatumed, threatening to withdraw the loan unless the whiskers were spared. It was all settled at a high-powered conference. Price paid for the scalp was unrevealed.

Crooner Big Crosby has consented to journey to Vancouver, British Columbia, this summer to help celebrate the golden jubilee anniversary of the founding of the city. Mayor G. G. McGeer, handling the bids, reported he has also invited President Roosevelt, the Premier of Canada and the Lord Mayor of London.

A Good Trick!

Jean Harlow is flattered by the request of a southern Illinois bride to autograph a chain of rice found in the gal's hair, (said to be the same color as actress') after the church-to-car barrage. A good trick if Harlow can do it.

Cary Grant reports, for what the information is worth, that he was once asked to autograph and old shoe, after it caromed off a bridegroom's dome.

Brown, Film Star, Goes to Hospital

Baltimore, May 7 (AP).—A minor spine injury suffered years ago as a circus performer sent wide-mouthed Joe E. Brown, movie comedian, to the Johns Hopkins Hospital here for an examination.

Dr. G. E. Bennett, bone specialist, said today Brown will not undergo an operation. Dr. Bennett said:

"Mr. Brown was a circus performer for many years. He injured his spine in a minor way a long while ago and from time to time has it examined just to see that everything is all right. He was in the East this spring so he came to the Johns Hopkins."

Brown was accompanied by Mrs. Brown.

Dr. Bennett and Dr. William F. Rienhoff, jr., examined Max Baer's hands before the Baer-Louis fight last summer.

Coast Students Win Demands, End Strike

Pullman, Wash., May 7 (AP).—The 7,000 striking Washington State students tonight won virtually all three demands for more liberal campus regulations and announced they would return to classes tomorrow after a one-day strike.

A full faculty "senate" reported, after a meeting of more than two hours, approval of the concessions which a faculty committee of nine had agreed to in conference with a student committee yesterday.

The students called today's walk-out in protest over the delay in official action on the committee's recommendations.

NELSON B. BELL.

A GRAYING actor of medium height, a kindly reticence and a little more than average weight, peering at the world through strong-lensed spectacles, is perhaps the usual mental picture of Jean Hersholt retained by those who have followed his American screen career down the years from "The Younger Generation" and "Abie's Irish Rose," through "Stella Dallas," with the late Belle Bennett and Lois Moran; "Greed," "So Big," with Colleen Moore; "The Student Prince," with Ramon Novarro; "The Sin of Madelon Claudet," Helen Hayes' Academy Award picture, and "Grand Hotel," to "Men in White," with Clark Gable and Elizabeth Allan, and "The Country Doctor,' with the Dionne Quintuplets, which completed its repeat engagement at the Columbia Theater last night.

Never, by the wildest flight of imagination, could the name of this splendid Danish character actor be associated in anyone's consciousness with any but screen activities that have reflected the highest ethical and moral worth. His talents never have been lent to the aggrandizement of questionable qualities of drama or the glorification of shady productional practices that sometimes skim by, just this side of the line and the law as laid down by Will Hayes and the Code. If one were called upon suddenly to name a player whose professional life exemplifies all that is clean, wholesome and fine, his mind most likely would strike first upon the name of Jean Hersholt.

Now then, when one meets Mr. Hersholt in person—as some no doubt did yesterday evening—many of these preconceived notions of what he is like are dispelled. But only those pertaining to his physical contours.

He is taller than the screen makes him appear. He also is younger, more dynamic and quicker on the mental and verbal trigger—but no less kindly, no less genial and no less immediately likeable than one always has supposed.

Mr. Hersholt's personality might be guessed from the things he most enjoys as hobbies—the collection of rare books, sketching and dabbling with the palette, brushes and pigments, at which he is quite an adept. His paintings are rated good.

These things I believe to be true about Mr. Hersholt, although I wouldn't know first-hand. At 6 o'clock last evening, Mr. Vallee's rehearsal for his exclusive broadcast had not permitted Mr. Hersholt to present himself in the rooms of the Variety Club to keep a 5 o'clock appointment with the press—and deadlines are deadlines.

Flutters were caused yesterday midafternoon in a Press Building elevator when Peter Lorre, another star of the celluloids who was in town to participate in Rudy Vallee's broadcast last evening over Station WRC, sought vainly for the fourteenth floor of a 13-story edifice. I am informed by Mary Harris, the newly accredited stentoress of Mr. Leonard Schloss' Glen Echo Park, that strong men stood back respectfully from the diminutive actor, who was so ominous in "Crime and Punishment," and susceptible ladies practically swooned in their tracks at being in such close proximity to the man who first came to screen attention, on this side, in "M," a gruesome initial standing for the violent word of "murder." Mrs. Harris disclaims any effort on her part to lure Mr. Lorre to Glen Echo and a ride on those "drive-'em-yourself" motorboats. After all, that water is deep enough to drown in, provided you are held under long enough, head first!

The likeness of Mary Loane—and it is a rather good one—appearing on this page today, will recall to many of the faithful the comparatively remote days in which she labored honorably and well as a member of Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran's National Theater Players, when that stalwart organization was in its heyday. It also, no doubt, will recall to Mr. Cochran and a few others, including Miss Loane, another enterprise of some importance in the professional life of the doughty manager of the National, recently celebrated by Mr. John J. Daly in a Sabbath panegyric of noble pith and proportions.

Whether the others deign to bring it back to mind or not, I well remember the blistering afternoon on which Mr. Cochran Packarded your present reporter, Miss Loane and one or two others to the Washington Airport to welcome the plane bearing Glenn Hunter, Leonard Bergman and other Broadway "big shots" to town to prepare a new play for local presentation and a subsequent tour on the road.

The play was a trifle known by the name of "Peter Flies High" and was a child—not overly bright or strong—of the prolific pen of one Myron C. Fagan, who is not by any means to be confused with the late James Bernard Fagan, also a playwright with such items as "And So to Bed," "Hawthorne of the U. S. A.," "The Improper Duchess" and many more to his credit. The Mr. Fagan to whom we refer is the one who was the former husband of that spirited actress, Minna Gombell.

I suspect that if Mr. Cochran, by any chance, reads these lines, he will mutter into his long, white beard, "Why bring that up?" Well, Mr. Cochran, I am bringing all this up because Mary Loane was better than her play or Mr. Hunter and will be warmly welcomed back to your rostrum in Mr. Yokel's antic comedy by many old friends. So there.

The May 1 bulletin of the "Selected Motion Pictures" of the preceding month published by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., of which Will H. Hays is president, having just come to hand, it is interesting to note that the national consensus of preview committees is that the following films were the "best of the month:" "The Great Ziegfeld," "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "One Rainy Afternoon" and "Things to Come."

Of these, the Capital has seen all but one. "One Rainy Afternoon," the initial Mary Pickford-Jesse Lasky production for release through United Artists, has not as yet been screened here. Francis Lederer is the star and the picture is rated as "outstanding" in the field of "social comedy."

"The Great Ziegfeld," of course, scored tremendously in two weeks of road-showing at the National, and "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" is still going strong at the Metropolitan. H. G. Wells' "Things to Come" was quick to go, from the Palace!

Actors Looking At Themselves.

Hollywood, Calif., May 7.

The questions "What did you think when you saw yourself on the screen for the first time?" and "What do you like and dislike about yourself on the screen?" were asked of a number of actors and actresses.

MYRNA LOY.

I did the questioning because I believed it would be interesting to learn what various performers thought of themselves when they went to the movies.

George Raft was asked while he was giving himself a sun tan in his dressing room. He answered quickly: "I'm bad. I'm never satisfied. I don't please myself. I hope that I please the others."

• • • •

Myrna Loy, ready to fix the mascara on her eyes after a crying scene for the picture "To Mary—With Love," says: "The first time I saw myself on the screen—it was at the old United Studio, now United Artists—I ran screaming out of the projecting room. You can imagine how I looked to myself, for then I was disguised in an exotic role. Now my voice surprises me. It sounds so different, like listening to another person."

• • • •

James Cagney, while eating garlic toast at midnight in the Brown Derby, answers the question. "I don't like that guy on the screen at all. He's not my type. I don't like his looks. What I do like is the fact that there is an awareness, a conscious decision in his movements."

• • • •

Fritz Leiber, a newcomer to pictures, had a vivid first impression. He said: "It was a terrible feeling. Looking at myself on the screen for the first time, I felt that I was going to forget my lines."

• • • •

Gary Cooper, while eating borscht for lunch at the Paramount commissary, says: "Sometimes I appear egg-shaped, sometimes pear-shaped. Often, while I sit through one of my pictures, I labor through the performance. Millions of times I say: 'Gee, did I do that; and what for?'"

• • • •

John Barrymore, sitting in the Beverly Brown Derby with Elaine Barrie, talking about himself as Mercutio in "Romeo and Juliet," which he has just witnessed, says: "Vintage of ham as I am, I know how it's going to look. I don't surprise myself on the screen any more."

• • •

Paul Muni, in his portable dressing room on the set of the flicker "The Good Earth," declares: "I'm dissatisfied with myself on the screen. I see so much that didn't come through, and I'm afraid that the audience will be able to see it also. There's only one thing I've done in pictures that satisfies me. That's the big speech before the Academy in 'Pasteur.' I don't look at the rushes of my pictures. I don't want to discourage myself."

• • • •

Luise Rainer, sitting on the running board of an auto outside the sound stage where "The Good Earth" is being filmed, says: "I took my first look at myself and said: 'I tank I go home. I don't like me.'"

• • • •

Barbara Stanwyck, in her portable dressing room while waiting to play a scene for the flicker "Marry the Girl," answers: "I frighten myself. I look at myself on the screen and I'm scared. My voice sounds like a foghorn at night. My mouth is crooked. One eye is up. I don't look like a raving beauty. I wonder what people see in me? I know I wouldn't write myself a fan letter."

• • • •

These are the honest answers of actresses and actors. The questions were asked at various times, and not one performer knew what the others answered. The actors and actresses panned themselves. Yet they complain when the critics don't like them.

Drys Nominate Dr. D. L. Colvin For Presidency

Alvin C. York, World War Hero, Chosen as His Running Mate.

By the Associated Press.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., May 7.—The Prohibition Party placed the first ticket in the 1936 Presidential race today, nominating Dr. D. Leigh Colvin, of New York City, for President and then drafting Sergt. Avin C. York, of Tennessee, famous World War hero, for Vice President.

Dr. Colvin is a nationally known dry leader, but York is not a member of the party and leaders at the national convention here said they were not certain he would accept.

Sergt. York is the country boy who was drafted during the World War against his religious scruples and became, in Gen. Pershing's words, "the greatest civilian soldier of the World War."

Just another doughboy corporal when the American Army plunged into the Argonne Forest in 1918, he became a national hero in a few wild minutes when he killed 25 Germans and took 132 prisoners on an October morning after his detachment was almost wiped out.

The Detachment walked unexpectedly into a German machine gun battalion hidden in the dense forest. His companions managed to reach shelter, but York was caught in the open, so he "just sat in the mud and used my rifle," as he explained later. A dead shot, every time a German head showed above a machine gun pit, York "teched him off," in his own words. The remaining Germans surrendered.

Dr. Colvin accused the liquor traffic of creating "women drinkers" in the keynote speech of the convention on Tuesday. He said the "reign of rum" under repeal was worse than ever before because this was the first time in this country's history that women and girls were being "alcoholized." He said nothing today about his plans for the campaign.

National Chairman Edward E. Blake, who was re-elected this afternoon, said some time ago that he hoped York would run, as he considered the Tennessee mountaineer, now head of a school he founded at Jamestown, Tenn., an unusual speaker who would add "color" to any ticket.

Colby Scores New Deal.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 7 (U.P.).—Businessmen are being treated as though they were "pickpockets" by Government officials who, in the main, are the most ignorant, untrained, trivial persons ever wafted into public office," Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State in the Wilson Administration, told the New Jersey Manufacturers Association tonight.

"The hostility obviously felt and constantly manifested by the present Administration toward the business interests of the country is incomprehensible," he added.

"American businessmen are men of integrity . . . there is, of course, in every 1,000 men a statistical percentage of knaves and chiselers. The duty of government is to weed out such men. This does not mean, however, that government should smear the honest and dishonest alike.

"And who are the public officials from whom proceed this constant slurring of American business and businessmen? In the main, they are the most trivial bunch of ignorant, untrained and inexperienced men who were ever wafted into public office."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Community Center Department presents Evelyn Davis and her dance group in Roosevelt High School auditorium Thursday night. Program: Trio (Purcell), Gigue (Loeillet), Pavane (Byrd), Sarabande (Couperin), Whimsy (Mary Howe), Primitive Suite (John Alden Finckel), Little Sister (Tansman), Circular Study (Tansman), Exaggerations: Inebriation and Discord (Finckel), Two Contrasts (Shostakovich), Dance on Two Themes (Finckel). At the piano: Alice Finckel.

Evelyn Davis is a mobile, mimetic and mischievous dancer, and a clever choreographer into the bargain. She has trained her muscles into absolute obedience until they respond instantly to the dictates of grace or purposive angularity. She has an athlete's control of her body and the flexibility of a contortionist. And the 16 dancers who formed her group last evening have been adaptable pupils in the lessons of technique, so that the ensemble has a notable coherence in stylized evolutions.

Evidently a thoroughgoing modernist is her theories of orchestics, Miss Davis also is enough of a latitudinarian not to despise the classic forms. The dances which she staged to music of Purcell, Loeillet, Byrd and Couperin were charming pictorially and delightful in their evocation of a bygone age, with just the right touches of twentieth century gesture for piquancy.

Miss Davis shows an infallible flair for the type of music which suits her transformations into dance movement. She danced Mary Howe's "Whimsy" like a veritable incarnation of Puck. The compositions of Tansman and Shostakovich chosen for their rhythmic patterns were abstract music, carrying no connotations of emotion to distract the spectator from the feeling embodied in the dances. And when she wishes to present her conceptions freed from any attachment to recognizable compositions, she has the instinct to seek her own composer.

She is fortunate in having for such a collaborator John Alden Finckel, whose sympathy with her ideas is apparent. For the "Primitive Suite," which may be called a modified and more beautiful "Sacre du Printemps," Mr. Finckel has written a correspondingly primitive score—music almost entirely rhythmic and barbaric, yet without the outrageous brutality with which Stravinski beats the ears.

Connally Leads Tax Revolt

was generally believed that if the President would repeat his statement to the effect that Congress would have full scope in drafting its own tax program, an entirely new bill would be written in the Senate.

As the situation stood yesterday, there appeared a strong liklihood that this may be attempted anyway. At least 7 of the 15 Democratic members of the committee are known to be privately antagonistic to the measure. With the exception of Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, the five minority members are believed to be solidly against it.

Typical of the sentiment expressed yesterday by members of the dissenting group was a statement to The Post by Senator David I. Walsh, influential Massachusetts Democrat.

Wants Bill Redrafted.

"After listening to the testimony," Walsh said, "it is my personal impression that the bill will have to be extensively and materially redrafted. I think a good many of my colleagues on the committee feel the same way."

The Connally proposal submitted to the Treasury for estimates yesterday is based on the theory that sound tax administration requires retention of the tried-and-tested corporation income tax, at least in part. The present corporate income tax ranges from 12½ to 15 per cent. Connally, in the plan now tentatively advanced, would retain a 12½ per cent flat corporate income tax, and in addition levy a 12½ per cent additional tax on undistributed earnings, on the theory that the 25 per cent total tax would produce all of the revenue required.

A variation on the Connally plan will be offered by Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, as one of two substitute proposals he is drafting. King's other alternative advises a moderate increase in the corporate income tax, and revision of the individual income tax schedules, by reducing individual exemptions and slightly raising the normal and surtax rates.

Harrison Silent on Plans.

Chairman Harrison, engaged in a search for $380,000,000 in additional three-year revenue, was in conference with Treasury experts yesterday, but declined to disclose what he has in mind, or whether he himself may propose a variation on the original House measure.

The fate of the Administration's proposed dividend-forcing corporation earnings tax in the final committee showdown appeared to hinge largely on whether Republicans co-operate with conservative committee Democrats in devising a substitute. If they follow the course of House Republicans, in refusing to vote for any tax plan, it was pointed out that the conservative move for revision may be lost.

The universal business protest against the pending measure was again emphasized yesterday, when representatives of the National Association of Manufacturers, the American Mining Congress, the heavy goods industries, tanners and accountants solidly opposed the bill. Hearings will enter their final session today, when Harrison announced he will clear the witness docket.

"Would Complicate Taxes."

The Association of Manufacturers sent James A. Emery, general counsel; Noel Sargent, secretary, and Will H. Mooney, president of the American Oak Leather Co., to testify against the bill.

Emery said the measure would enhance existing inequalities, complicate the tax structure, and provide an uncertain source of revenue, and contended it is sound policy to encourage business to build up reserves rather than deplete them. Emery said the proposed tax would operate as follows:

"The mature corporation with adequate reserves would avoid the taxation it is sought to assure by a high percentage of distribution, while the new, the progressive and the growing corporation will pay enormous penalties for the reserve essential to maintenance of its growth."

Suggesting a comprehensive study of the tax system, and delay of any action until next session, Sergeant called the tax bill "deliberate economic planning," and a further move toward "regimentation."

"Corporations are groups of individuals who have invested their savings in joint business enterprises," said Sergeant. "In the minds of many who advocate such a tax as this is the idea of finding a means for Federal control of all industry through substituting Government discretion for that of management as to the amount of earnings which should be retained in business.

"To this they would add governmental control of new security issues and labor policies of private corporations. If, in addition to what already has been done, we once start the policy of using taxation to prevent accumulation of corporate savings, there is grave danger that we will be embarking on a road that will lead to the use of taxation policies to control individual savings."

Says It Taxes "Littleness."

Speaking for Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., one of the larger makers of farm equipment and machinery, H. W. Story, of Milwaukee, Wis., said the bill is fundamentally wrong in principle, transgresses every rule of on the basis of ability to pay, imposes a "tax on littleness" and would make "weak corporations weaker."

"This bill creates more inequities than could possibly exist under any bill we ever had, or I could conceive of," he said. "It fixes a dividend policy for every corporation, on the basis of a 15 per cent tax."

Pointing out that Allis-Chalmers is contemplating an expansion policy, which it may not now undertake, Story said it earned $3,000,000 last year, paid no dividends, but under the proposed bill would have to pay $1,000,000 in taxes.

"Would Stifle Expansion."

Story, who said the proposed plan would "stabilize industrial expansion at present levels" and "absolutely stifle expansion" of the smaller concerns, proposed instead that the committee find out just how much additional taxation is necessary to raise the $600,000,000 the President said is needed, devise a rule of "sound maximum taxation" and impose taxes business "can pay without wrecking it."

Among representatives of mining interests came Donald A. Callahan, speaking for the Idaho Mining Association, who paid high tribute to the "artistic" appearance of the bill, but said it violated every maxim of taxation laid down by Adam Smith.

Callahan said the mining industry does not "relish the idea of a system of taxation which will dictate to them, through the imposition of what we regard as penalties, the policy of distributing or retaining earnings for the benefit of both the stockholders and the corporation as an entity."

4 Bank Recommendations.

Four separate recommendations on taxes as affecting the banks of the country were sent to the committee by the American Bankers Association. Conceding that the Administration has been most successful in "the rehabilitation of the banking structure, and both Congress and the Administration have encouraged banks to build up surplus and reserves, the association urges that the 15 per cent preferential rate on bank earnings in the House bill "be not changed."

The A. B. A. also asked that "serious consideration * * * be given to the continued exemption of bank dividends from the normal income ciation protested the holding company tax." In another letter, the association provision of the House bill as it applied to banks, pointing out that there are bank holding companies having deposits of $5,000,000,000, which would come under The American Bankers Association further pointed out that under the definition of "banks" as provided in the House bill, banks and trust companies in the District of Columbia, which are not incorporated under the laws of the District, are excluded, and certain trust companies in the country at large, which do a purely trust business, are not included in the bill's definition.

A communication was received from the Federal Housing Administration asking that national mortgage associations be allowed to exempt from the tax the portion of income prescribed by law to be set aside for legal reserves. the high-tax provisions.

Campbell's Mother Is Broken Hearted

Tulsa, Okla., May 7 (A.P.).—The white-haired mother of Harry Campbell wept tonight and said her son, outlaw companion of Alvin Karpis, had broken her heart.

Campbell's parents, law-abiding Mr. and Mrs. George C. Campbell, secluded themselves and refused to discuss directly the arrest of their erring son at Toledo, Ohio.

For years the misbehaving Campbell was "small fry" to officers of this section. Then his name was linked with those of Karpis and the late Freddie Barker. Last February 28 police announced he killed J. Earl Smith, Tulsa lawyer, August 19, 1932. Jimmie Lawson, life-termer at the Kansas Penitentiary, was brought here last February to tell o fthe Smith slaying. The attorney had called Campbell in an effort to collect $3,200 fee for defending him in a robbery case, Lawson said.

Ruhland Ends War On Bus Ventilation

Punitive warfare against the Capital Transit Co. for badly ventilated buses ended yesterday when Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, told William A. Roberts, people's counsel, he saw no purpose in making tests of air in buses at this time.

Roberts had sought evidence with which to push a suit against the companies for failure to have their buses ventilated within the broad general health terms of the public utilities commission. The commission has a ventilation order under consideration.

"I am of the opinion, Dr. Ruhland wrote Roberts, "that any investigation undertaken at this time is to be less fruitful than at a time when the buses are closed."

The Zeppelin had radioed from a position off the Mediterranean coast of Spain that she feared she would be unable to fly sufficiently high to cross the Alps as a result of an accident in Rio de Janeiro.

(As she approached Barcelona, Spain, the Graf wirelessed her headquarters in Friedrichafen that she was experiencing no difficulty.)

(While landing at Rio May 1 the veteran dirigible got out of control, struck a hangar wall and tore a 30-foot rent in its envelope.)

The craft was understood to have developed motor trouble late yesterday.

WPA Defended By Aid, Assailed In Radio Forum

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 7.—Federal relief methods were alternately defended and criticized tonight by an assistant WPA administrator and a banker-industrialist.

Howard Bruce, Baltimore banker, industrialist and New Deal critic, declared the present activities of the WPA "do not supply even temporarily a satisfactory solution of the problem."

"Work relief, where work done under great pressure is devised to absorb millions of unemployed, which has this immediate absorption as its main motive, defeats its very object," he said.

Col. Lawrence Westbrook, assistant to WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, took an opposite view in a discussion at Town Hall under the auspices of the League for Political Education. The talks were broadcast over WJZ—N. B. C.

Emphasizing that neither the FERA, the CWA nor its predecessors was set up to "solve" the unemployment problem, Col. Westbrook said:

"It should be clearly remembered that the FERA, the CWA and the WPA were never intended to be a part of our industrial mechanism, but merely a substitute for it, during a period of reconstruction."

Bruce maintained that "made work under unorthodox regulations does not add to the self-respect of the individual."

"He knows he is on relief," he said, "and his effort will be to obtain the meager security wage with a minimum of effort."

The accompanists will be Carire V. Byram, Richard Wagner, and Helen M. Bellman.

King Opposes Lease Of Swimming Pool

Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, yesterday had the Senate reconsider its passage of a bill authorizing the National Capital Parks office to lease the East Potomac Park swimming pool, now under construction, to the operator of the golf course. He explained that he will confer with the District Commissioners about the matter before taking any further action.

"I always have favored placing all parks and recreational agencies directly under the District Commissioners," he said, "and I'm still for it. There's entirely too much division of authority."

U. S. Will Build Laboratories Near Bethesda

Public Health Service Gets Donated Tract; Bids Asked on Animal House.

The United States Public Health Service is preparing to build a research laboratory, costing ultimately $1,500,000, near Bethesda, Md., it was disclosed in hearings on the deficiency appropriations bill released yesterday.

Witnesses stated that $100,000 for building already available out of the 1934 emergency relief program, and $1,363,000 additional, has been requested for the project, approved by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Josephine Roche.

The site, a 45-acre tract, was acquired by donation from Luke I. Wilson, according to O. J. Peoples, director of the Treasury Department's procurement division. Bids have been asked for construction of an animal house as the initial unit.

The disclosure recalled that last year vigorous protests were made by Montgomery County residents, when the Public Health Service project was proposed. Among those who objected were Canon G. Freeland Peter and Merle Thorpe, editor of the Nation's Business, whose property adjoins the Wilson tract.

The county commissioners and the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce entered protests to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission to no avail.

The Public Health Service plans to build one laboratory building of three stories and a basement, one office building, a powerhouse, and to improve roads and walkways. In addition, two senior and six junior medical officers' quarters will be constructed.

L. R. Thompson, acting surgeon general, said there is an urgent need for the additional experimental facilities and has asked that the Bethesda project be given priority over the other Public Health Service proposals.

The project involves no congressional appropriation, and so does not come under the jurisdiction of the House Appropriations Committee.

Long-Distance Rates Too High, Congress Told

Long distance telephone rates are "very much too high," Chairman Paul A. Walker, of the Federal Communications Commission, has advised Congress, publication of his testimony before a House Appropriations sub-committee revealed yesterday.

He also told the sub-committee that the extra "discouragement" charges for handset telephones have no "justication." The Federal Communications Commission is investigating the American Telephone & Telgraph Co.

He said:

"When they started to put in the hand sets, they charged 50 cents a month as a so-called discouragement charge, and they have made very substantial revenues out of that.

"There is no justification, as I see it, for a continuance of any charge for a hand set. This thing ought to be wiped out."

He also held in his testimony that a license contract arrangement, under which the A. T. & T. received $14,000,000 in annual fees from operating companies, was "wholly unjustified."

The deficiency appropriation bill, meanwhile, containing $400,000 requested by Walker to continue to investigation of the giant concern, was in the bill as reported out on the floor yesterday. Walker holds that this sum is necessary to maintain a large staff of investigators, trained accountants and lawyers to search and study the A. T. & T. records in New York City. Without it the investigation will cease in July. If it is obtained, the work will continue to February, 1937. The original appropriation of $750,000 is nearly exhausted, it is understood.

Twin Cities Drivers Get Gas in Strike

St. Paul, May 7 (A.P.).—Twin Cities motorists experienced little difficulty in obtaining gasoline today as a strike of the Petroleum Workers Union, started last midnight, closed an estimated 800 of the 1,300 service stations in St. Paul and Minneapolis.

The strike, called to protest a leasing system which union officials asserted was forcing attendants out of work, affected about three-fourths of the stations in Minneapolis and half those in St. Paul.

About 200 independent stations, having agreements with the unions operated as usual and sufficient others remained open in spite of the strike to furnish motor fuel in most parts of the two cities.

But William McComiskey, president of the union, forecast the walkout would force 80 per cent of the stations in both communities to close. He said he had issued orders against "rough tactics." The only police calls during the day involved minor disorders.

Relief Fund Split Voted Down

He plans to present an amendment today to earmark $350,000,000 for the Public Works Administration. An attempt to present a resolution containing the smaller amount was ruled out of order in the caucus, Beiter said.

In addition to the huge relief appropriation, designed to continue the Administration's present policy of providing "made" work, the bill called for $308,000,000 for the Civilian Conservation Corps, $458,631,860 for the Social Security Board and $65,550,000 for emergency public building, in addition to numerous appropriations for various Government departments and offices.

The Administration's original request for relief was cut by $75,000,000, with an amount almost as large added to the appropriation for the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Public utilities, including sewer systems, water supply and purification, airports and other transportation facilities, $171,000,000.

Flood control and other conservation, $128,250,000.

National Youth Administration, $71,250,000.

Each of the items was cut slightly by the committee. The $85,500,000 appropriation for rural rehabilitation and relief to farmers presumably will go to Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, head of the Resettlement Administration. This is the only item that would not be administered directly by Hopkins.

At the last moment before reporting the bill, the Appropriations Committee unanimously adopted a resolution to take 13 New Deal setups out of the emergency classification by providing that after June 30, 1937, they may not incur any obligations without specific appropriations.

The organizations affected are the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, HOLC, FHA, Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, Export-Import Bank, Second Export Bank, RFC, Electric Home and Farm Authority, Commodity Credit Corporation, WPA, Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation and the RFC Mortgage Co.

The deficiency bill was taken up immediately after the committee reported without a special rule and with an agreement to limit debate to seven hours. At the close of debate on the bill, a flood of amendments is expected. Chairman Buchanan of the Appropriations Committee said he hoped to have the measure up to the point of passage by tonight, but that a vote will be postponed until Monday.

As the bill was reported, the committee made public the testimony given in hearings on the measure, including that of Hopkins.

Hopkins urged against setting up any permanent form of, relief at this time, but said that eventually there would have to be a permanent relief plan in which the Federal Government would continue to share. He used the same arguments that were used later by President Roosevelt in his Baltimore speech against employment of children and old people.

"It seems perfectly absurd to me," he told the committee, "that we have 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 children under 18 years of age that work in industry when we have high school graduates, college graduates and others roaming the streets looking for jobs. If seems equally absurd to me that we have some 3,000,000 working in factories and in industry in America over the age of 65. In other words, I think the emphasis and the thinking of Congress should be far more on the whole problem of unemployment than on the problem of relief.

"I believe that you are going to need a permanent plan for relief in America in which the Government will share. It may not be this one at all; it may not be this kind of program at all. But I would rather postpone the date to determine what the permanent program should be until a time when you can envisage the extent of the problem as a permanent problem far better than we can today. In other words, my thinking centers entirely around the problem of unemployment, to which relief is no answer, whether it is work or the dole, or whatever it is."

Repeating his assertion that relief is not helping solve the unemployment problem, Hopkins told the committee:

"The longer I have anything to do with relief, the more I am convinced that it has little to do with reviving employment as such; that it is a palliative; that it is a necessary thing."

Hopkins, as well as committee members, estimated that the carryover during the next fiscal year from the present $4,880,000,000 appropriation would be approximately $1,000,000,000. With the CCC appropriation and other money that could be used for relief purposes it is estimated that, if the new bill passes in its present form, there will be about $3,100,000,000 available next year. Expenditures by all relief agencies this year are estimated at about $3,500,000,000. Hopkins told the committee that he expected a reduction of unemployment would enable him to operate with the proposed sum.

Republicans in the House are planning to attempt to amend the bill to provide that works operations in the States shall be administered by bi-partisan boards appointed by governors. Another group is expected to demand that money be turned over to States in lump sums for administration locally. Another amendment is expected to require that States contribute at least 25 per cent to the cost of relief for employables. States at present contribute sums ranging from almost nothing in some Southern States, to 62 per cent.

In opening the House debate, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, declared that the Government is "trying to get out of the relief business." He admitted that there had been mistakes in relief administration, but that they had not been important mistakes.

In voicing his opposition, Representative Taber, of New York, ranking Republican member of the Appropriations Committee, declared that "to my mind it is absolutely essential that we reorganize the whole relief position—take it out of the hands of Washington and place it in the hands of the States.

"Let us permit the States to administer relief and relief employment in such a manner that local people will be free to meet local problems effectively," he said. "Let us require a sufficient local contribution in each case to insure efficient management.

"Since 1933 there has been appropriated for Federal relief, exclusive of credit agencies, a total of $11,732,000,000. This terrific expense puts heavy taxes on the people, demoralizes enterprise and so prevents an increase in employment.

"During the last three years we have had everything save responsibility and intelligence in the administration of relief. Allotments in some States have been as low as 35 per cent of the total relief cost, while in other States the Federal share has run over 99 per cent of the total. Administrative expenses have ranged from 18 per cent in South Carolina to 5 per cent in Vermont and Massachusetts.

"Because of the purely political administration which has been enforced in many States, the relief machinery generally is saturated and bogged down by inefficiency, waste and political campaigning."

Representative Beiter, in a statement, expressed disapproval of the suggestion of Administration leaders that loans and grants could be made by the RFC for municipal improvements. He said the proposal was "totally unworkable." Still demanding that money be turned over to the PWA, he said that the Ickes organization is working smoothly and to give the job to the RFC would mean long delays. He referred to the RFC proposal as a "compromise."

The RFC plan was explained at the caucus last night by Representative Bankhead, of Alabama, majority leader. It was explained that under the plan 55 per cent of the cost of municipal improvements would be loaned to cities by the RFC and the remaining 45 per cent would be supplied by the WPA. This plan is similar to that previously followed by the PWA, but under the proposed arrangement Secretary Ickes would have no part in the program. It is believed that new legislation would be necessary to put it in effect.

In addition to relief and social security appropriations, the deficiency bill contains these items:

To the Advisory Committee for Aeronautics to expand research facilities in pace with military and commercial aviation development, $1,367,000.

To the Postoffice Department, chiefly for meeting increased costs caused by the 40-hour week and increased air mail rates allowed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, $40,625,750.

For War Department construction work, $9,380,000 and $3,000,000 to fulfill contract authorizations.

To the Commerce Department for air navigation facilities this year, $14,600 and for maintenance next year, $80,000.

Hopkins Asked Reason for Big Capital Relief

House Members Question WPA Chief at Hearing on Deficiency Bill.

The cause of the large unemployment relief load was discussed by the deficiency sub-committee of the House Appropriations Committee while questioning Harry L. Hopkins, WPA Administrator, it was disclosed yesterday in a transcript of hearings released with the deficiency appropriations bill.

Representative Bacon (Republican), of New York, raised the question of why the District has so many unemployed when the Federal Government pay roll has increased so greatly in the last few years.

Chairman Buchanan pointed out that the additional jobs have not gone to Washingtonians, but to residents of the States, and that the very lure of Federal jobs and unemployment relief has led thousands of jobless to flock to the National Capital.

Huge Employment Gain.

"The United States employes, outside of the uniformed forces, have increased in the last six years from 80,000, to 129,000," Bacon observed. "The average pay has increased from $1,600 a year to 2,100 a year, and yet today there are 27,000 people on relief—more than ever before."

Buchanan replied that "most of these have come from the States. They were not taken out of the District. The 5,000 heads of families that you have in the District are practically unemployable."

When Bacon put his question directly to Hopkins, the WPA administrator said:

"I think those two answers give you the information. First, the enormous number of people that have come here. Secondly, the jobs that you speak of did not go to residents of the District of Columbia."

Denies Regulations More Lax.

Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, asked Hopkins if the regulations governing relief are not more lax in Washington than in the States.

"I would not think so," he replied.

"I think the condition of the streets in the District of Columbia is worse than in any city of its size in the United States," he said.

W. A. Xanten, of the street cleaning department, laid the blame on the WPA workers. Discussing the use of PWA workers in snow removal, he said:

"There were many WPA men engaged in that work. Some of them leaned on their shovels until they were crooked."

Hoffman Opposes Parker Extradition

Newark, N. J., May 7 (A.P.).—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman said today he would not permit the extradition of Ellis Parker, sr., "if the facts in the case are as I now understand them, to save the face of a discredited Brooklyn district attorney."

Parker, Burlington County chief of detectives, was described in a statement by a witness to District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan of Brooklyn, as the "brains" of the Paul H. Wendel abduction.

It was Parker, authorities contend, who obtained from Wendel a "confession" he kidnaped the Lindbergh baby. The confession, later repudiated, delayed the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the Lindbergh kidnaping.

Ellis Parker, jr., Parker's son, is one of those indicted in the Wendel abduction. Geoghan said today he might have to seek the aid of Federal authorities to bring about the arrest of Parker, now being sought.

old Pension Office Building, the committee said: "The Pension Office Building should not be demolished."

While no explanation was given by the committee for its elimination of the $300,000 appropriation for the Alley Dwelling Authority, it was evident from the hearings that several members were under the mistaken impression that the authortiy was limited by its organic act to $500,000.

Chairman Buchanan, in questioning John Ihlder, executive officer of the ADA, asked if the act does not limit the agency to $500,000. Ihlder replied that the Comptroller General had ruled that it does not.

"The act very plainly says that the amount is not to exceed $500,000," Buchanan replied, "and it was evidently intended as a revolving fund. It seems to contemplate that with a capital stock of $500,000 that is placed in the Treasury you were charged with the duty of clearing up the alleys of the District of Columbia."

Explaining that the authority already has spent $700,000, an additional $200,000 coming from WPA, Ihlder said:

"We got an opinion from the Comptroller General to the effect that we could expand the first $500,000 and, further, that the President colud allocate $200,000 out of the emergency relief appropriation act of 1935."

Ihlder said that there still is $408,000 cash in the fund, but $350,000 of that is encumbered and $45,324.50 additional has been set aside for unpaid obligations.

Receipts Only $2,000.

Receipts from rentals of renovated dwellings and sale of materials have amounted to only $2,000 so far, Ihlder added.

Asked for an estimate of what it would cost to clean up all of Washington's alleys, Ihlder said:

"I think it would probably cost at least $15,000,000 to do the whole job. That is a guess. The assessed value of alley dwelling property alone is estimated at $9,000,000."

Subsequently he expressed the opinion that with a capital of $3,000,000 in a revolving fund the Alley Dwelling Authority could complete the work within the period specified by Congress.

Extension of water service, $60,000; printing for courts, $500; transportation of crippled children, $150; disposal of garbage, $23,000; Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, $607, and playgrounds, $21.98.

Major items appropriated are $100,000 for the District share of unemployment relief fund; $90,000 for street repairs, and $400,652.31 for miscellaneous public welfare deficiencies.

Gevinson Moves Toward Olympic Berth With 2 Kayoes in Trials

D. C. Fighter Is Sensation In Tryouts

Nedomatsky Draws Bye; Farrar, Duke Welter, Gets Decision.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Ill., May 7.—Tonight's bouts in the elimination to select members of the U. S. Olympic boxing team produced a sensation in the person of 20-year-old Lou Gevinson, a clerk in the Treasury Department in Washington.

A sharp-shooting southpaw, reminding old-time ringsiders of Lew Tendler, Gevinson scored two knockouts. The Capital's 126-pound hope first flattened Corpl. Paul Bensilhe, of the Army, and then came back to score a technical knockout over Elmer Kelly, of Loyola University of New Orleans.

The Jewish youngster floored the Army corporal with a mighty right to the chin soon after the second round started. At the count of nine, the soldier was up and made a wild lunge at Gevinson. The soldier's chin ran into another terrific right and he went down for the full count.

Gevinson polished off the Loyola student in much the same fashion. He dropped Kelly in the first round and then spilled him again in the second. Kelly was in no condition to continue and the referee waved Gevinson to his corner.

The national collegiate heavyweight champion, Tom Pontecarvo, of Western Maryland, turned in the most spectacular heavyweight bout. He defeated Allen Walz, of New York, in a tough three-rounder.

Farrar Triumphs.

Danny Farrar, Duke University welterweight, reached the second round by outpointing Sergt. Louis Angelucci, U. S. Army, Hawaii, in three rounds. Al Mann, Duke 160-pounder, was eliminated by Milton Shivers, Detroit Negro, by a technical knockout in two rounds.

Tonight's bouts, and those tomorrow night, will reduce the original field of 90 to 16 for the championship round. The 16 survivors will remain here to battle it out in the Chicago stadium May 20 for the United States championship in eight weight divisions and get ready to sail for the international battles in Germany.

The battles tonight brought together champions from all parts of the country—the best in college, boxing, golden gloves title holders, National A. A. U. champions and soldiers representing the United States Army from Hawaii.

Mickey Bruto, of the University of West Virginia lost to Joe Church, of Batavia, N. Y. in the 126-pound division, while Denver Welsh of the same school also lost in the next higher class.

Champion Putters About a Bit Before Battle

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

That Freddie Miller will be in capable hands when he crawls through the ropes at Griffith Stadium next Monday evening is fairly certain, inasmuch as Mr. Pete Reilly will be in his corner. Mr. Reilly, who doubles as both manager and chief second of the world's featherweight champion, is no tyro at the business, it seems. Mr. Reilly, furthermore, is recognized as a very smart man in the prize-fight business.

POVICH.

The silver-thatched Irishman has his own ideas about seconding a fighter, especially his fighters. In the first place, Mr. Reilly devotes no less than one hour, give or take a few minutes, to bandaging the hands of his fighters, personally, before they go into the ring. And when Mr. Reilly bandages their hands there is no tape that would interfere with the impact of the knuckles, and no tape tightly wound about the wrist artery that might check blood circulation.

Mr. Reilly, it seems, has been bandaging hands for nigh onto 30 years now, and realizes that a fighter's hands are his chief tools. But he is a rugged individualist, not only in the matter of bandaging but in applying restorative measures to his fighters between rounds. Mr. Reilly, strange as it may seem, does not employ smelling salts when and if his fighters are groggy.

He has learned from high authorities among physicians that the ammonia gas diffused by the smelling salts constitutes too great a shock to a tired fighter's respiratory system. And he has called the turn on more than one fight after one of the lads has been subjected to the supposedly revitalizing fumes of the smelling salts.

If one of Mr. Reilly's fighters returns to his corner in a groggy state, then Mr. Reilly uses his own home remedy. Pressing his thumbs against each eye near the bridge of the nose, Mr. Reilly manipulates a certain nerve, for which he has his own name, and awaits results. If his groggy fighter responds, then the fight goes on with Mr. Reilly and his fighter very much relieved. If there is no response, then Mr. Reilly calls off hostilities and accepts defeat.

For all that anyone might notice, young Freddie Miller is no more disturbed by the fact that his fight with Pete Sarron is only three days away than he is by the fact that the Italians have finally occupied Addis Ababa. It's just another fight to Miller, who goes gayly on his way—playing golf, sparring, eating with evident relish, and otherwise enjoying himself up to the very moment when he steps into the ring.

That state of mind is the product of Mr. Reilly's association with the little German lad. Once upon a time, when Miller first came under Mr. Reilly's wing, the little fellow was a temperamental sort, who had read that other world champions were irritable and irascible as important fights neared and supposed that that was the proper way to react.

But Mr. Reilly, it seems, doesn't go for that stuff. He doesn't want any irritable or temperamental fighters around him, he says. And he says, furthermore, that this temperamental stuff is 98 per cent temper and 2 per cent mental, which is no condition for a fighter to enter the ring.

As I was saying, Mr. Reilly is a very smart man in the prize-ring business. When he managed Andre Routis, the Frenchman who acquired the world's featherweight championship, and matched Routis with Bat Battalino, Mr. Reilly accepted the bout only on the condition that Battalino fight under his management if he won the fight, which is what happened.

And when Battalino fought Miller in Cincinnati, Miller's home town, Mr. Reilly would have turned up as manager of Miller if the latter had knocked the crown from Battalino's head; so, you see, Mr. Reilly was overlooking no bets, large or small.

There was some suspicion among the sporting gentry in and about New York that Mr. Reilly was a very smart manipulator of his talent, and when Mr. Reilly matched his champion, Battalino, with Fidel LaBarba for the title, in New York, there was much ado about the fact that Reilly would receive a $35,000 guarantee if Battalino lost the title.

If Battalino won that fight, then Reilly was in for only 37½ per cent of the gate, which would amount to but $10,500. Thus it was worth about $25,000 for Reilly and Battalino to lose to LaBarba, and, on that supposition, the wise money made LaBarba a 3-to-1 favorite. New York's betting fraternity is still ringing with the wails and resounding to the teeth-gnashing that followed Battalino's defeat of LaBarba. Mr. Reilly's tactics, it seems, are unpredictable.

Miller, Sarron Relax to Keep Fine Edge

By Bill McCormick.

Banishing all thoughts of his title defense to be made at Griffith Stadium Monday night, Miller spent the day on the golf course with his manager, wily old Pete Reilly, and his erstwhile golf instructor, Wiffy Cox.

Equally unthoughtful of the battle in which he will seek to wrest the 126-pound diadem from the sleek head of Miller, Sarron folded his training ring and stole silently away for a full day of fishing.

Both champion and challenger will return to the gymnasium today, but they will not work nearly so hard as they have during the past three weeks of tedious training routine.

A better-than-average golfer, Miller still found himself no match on the links for his manager, who made up for any lack of driving power by the manner in which he was able to make the ball perform at short range. At the end of 27 holes, Freddie was indebted to the Silver Fox of Fistiana for 25 cents, a matter than grieved him more than would the losing of the $10,000 purse he is to receive for battling Sarron.

At a late hour last night no report had been received on the fishing prowess of Sarron, but the little Syrian Sazerac is one of the better fishermen in these parts and no doubt gave a creditable account of himself.

While the fighters were resting, and have very little, if anything, to do between now and the time of the big bout, their managers were girding their loins for what promises to be a grand prefight brawl before the boxing commission this afternoon.

Not only must the question of fouls, refereeing, judging, etc., be settled, but the subject of what to do about wighing-in if there is a postponement also will be broached before the solons of sock at their meeting at 4 o'clock this afternoon to settle all dubious points.

It now seems almost a certainty that teeth will be given any action the local boxing commission may take in this fight, as the District moguls of maul gave every indication they would join the National Boxing Association today. Such an affiliation would give recognizance to any decision made by the District commssion in 30 States, 2 countries, 2 territories and 3 cities, now members of the N. B. A.

Jim McMillan And Robert Win Bouts

Billings and Olson Score Victories in Other Engagements.

By George Considine.

Yoompin' Yvon Robert and Gentleman Jim McMillan brought the indoor wrestling season to a close last night at Turner's Arena with respective, but far from respectful, victories over Charlie Strack and Len Hall.

Witnessed by more than 2,000 perspiring rasslegoers, the double feature saw Robert fell his man with a looping uppercut after 28 minutes, and McMillan crash through with what was described as a series of flying shoulder jolts in 39 and a hawf minutes.

Strack, a wise old man from Oklahoma, proved a tough nut to crack indeed. From start to finish he held the upper hand both in strength and grip repertoire. Only once in the first 20 minutes was the Canadian able to apply his famous carpet beater.

Unable to master the powerful Southwesterner in the legal manner, Robert drew a round of boos and catcalls by directing Strack's attention to Referee Bennah Bortnick and then sneaking up with a crushing right-hander to the button.

The McMillan-Hall opus was a recapitulation of all the exhibitions of the season. Comedy, tragedy, pathos, humor—all had their inning and all were enthusiastically received by the large, warm (literally) audience.

For the first 20 minutes Gentleman Jim was content to "take" everything. When thoroughly aroused, however, he experienced little trouble pitching the bad one to the far corners of the arena.

Then Mac seemed to tire and Hall went to work with renewed vigor. Things looked exceedingly bad for the people's choice for many minutes. But he rallied nobly and won going away, or rather butting away, while the customers cheered merrily.

Much to the expressed displeasure of the assemblage, Sailor Billings body-slammed Laverne Baxter, the lad with the silken tresses, in 15 minutes. And in the 14-minute curtain-hoister Olaf Olson outfumbled Jim Wallis.

Chisox Shell Newsom; Nats Drop Fifth, 11-6

By Shirley L. Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

The Nats' nose dive toward the nether regions of the league continued uninterrupted yesterday when they collected their fifth straight beating by the highly emphatic score of 11 to 6.

At one point in the proceedings, when Wahsington was in possession of a 4-1 lead, the Nats' losing streak was very much in danger, but the White Sox set all fears at rest by knocking the Nats' best pitcher, Buck Newsom, out of the box in the sixth inning, when they accumulated six runs.

Thereafter the White Sox rookie pitcher, Monty Stratton, a Texan who came to the club via St. Paul late last season, was very much in control of matters. He shut the Nats out from the third to the ninth inning, when he relented to the extent of two runs that served only to further delay the exit of the 3,000 fans.

Throughout the ball game, or rather, as long as he was in it, Buck Newsom was engaged in much banter with the folks on the White Sox bench, but Bucky Harris had the last word in the argument. He ordered Newsom out of the game i that nightmarish sixth inning when the White Sox were busily engaged in scoring in a six-run cluster.

The White Sox bounced in front 1-0, in the first inning when a base on balls was followed by Dixie Walker's singly to center, but the Nats tied it up in the second when Kuhel walked and eventually scored while Dykes was muffing Kress' grounder.

It was 4-1 in favor of Washington by the end of the fourth. Stratton's muff of Bonura's throw put Kuhel on base after two were out and Bolton followed with a double to center. At this point, Red Kress, Buddy Myer's substitute at second base, whacked a home run into the leftfield seats and the Nats had three more runs for their efforts.

In the fifth it was the White Sox's turn to tie the score. Newsom pitched a single to Stratton and walked Kreevich. Haas doubled to

Woodfellow Held Potent Threat

200 Horses Entered by 81 of Country's Leading Stables.

A new star will challenge the bid of Firenze Red Tape, the United States 1935 hunter champion, for National Capital Horse Show honors, beginning today at 10 o'clock on Bradley Farms, opposite the Congressional Country Club.

He is Woodfellow, 5-year-old brown thoroughbred from the barn of Helen Bedford's Winfromere Farm. He climaxed a string of sensational victories last week by taking the championship of the Newark (N. J.) Horse Show, one of the foremost meets of its kind, from King Vulture, who gave Firenze Red Tape a gruelling battle last year before Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim's horse was ruled the ranking No. 1 hunter in the United States.

Miss Bedford has entered Woodfellow in eight classes, including the events for 5 and 6 years old hunters shown under saddle, novice hunters and ladies' working hunters, all of which are listed today; the competitions for green or qualified hunters, thoroughbred hunters, model hunters and corinthian, set tomorrow, and the $500 hunter stake scheduled Sunday afternoon.

It is expected that President and Mrs. Roosevelt, who have engaged reservations, will put in an appearance at the meet some time before it draws to a close late Sunday, but Secretary Hubbert R. Quinter said last night the committee has not yet received any definite word from the White House.

The inaugural program today includes 19 of the 56 classes listed by the directors, who will award more than $5,000 in cash and trophies to the winers. More than 200 of the horses that have been entered by 81 of the Nation's leading stables will be seen in action during the morning and afternoon sessions today.

Joint features this morning will be the handicap jumping class, which has attracted 15 horses, and the local saddle class, in wnich a small but select field of four high-stepping mounts will be seen in action for the National Capital Challenge Trophy.

Marian Brown Sets Pace in Golf Trials

Manor Club Player Shoots Low Gross in Pictorial Review Play.

By Dave Herman.

Pretty Marian Brown, 18-year-old Manor Club golfer, won the honor of having the lowest gross score in the District sectional qualifying round of the Pictorial Review women's tournament yesterday.

Miss Brown, high school senior, shot an 84 to set the pace in the trials at her course and capture one of the four places allotted her club. This 84 with her 8 handicap gave her a net of 76.

With similar 18-hole rounds held on five other Washington courses and on links throughout the United States, the Manor miss came within one shot of tying Mrs. William DeLamater, of Kenwood, for the day's low net honor. Mrs. DeLamater had 106, 29—75, and showed the way in the event at her club.

Mrs. G. C. Roney led the Washington Golf and Country Club contingent, clicking off the lowest competitive medal round of her career, a 92, for a net of 77.

Mrs. W. B. Legg was low at Chevy Chase, scoring 99—12—87.

The pace-setter at Indian Spring was Mrs. J. H. Bullock, who had 98—17—81, while Mrs. C. E. Purdy, women's golf chairman, shot 95—14—81 to lead at Beaver Dam.

The sectional finals will be held at Indian Spring Thursday, May 21. Bronze medals will be awarded each low qualifier in yesterday's play, and a solid gold medal will be given the winner in the Middle Atlantic finals.

Eastern Wins, 7-3, Over W.-L. High

Searching for a winning combination to throw back in the inter-high series, Coach Charlie Guyon, of Eastern High, used two complete teams yesterday as the Lincoln Parkers struggled to a 7-3 victory over Washington-Lee High at Eastern Field.

The victory did not come quite as easily as the 17-5 win achieved at Ballston, Va., earlier in the season. Jimmy DeChard and Relief Pitcher Mead were nicked for a dozen hits, but 12 Little Generals were stranded on base to keep the score in reasonable bounds.

Mackenzie Not To Compete in Golf Open

Roland Mackenzie, young Congressional Country Club professional, will not make a bid for a berth in the National Open Golf championship, it was learned yesterday.

Mackenzie was to have played in the 36-hole qualifying trials at Ponte Vedra course, Jacksonville Beach, Fla., next Monday, but yesterday he told his friends a conflict in dates with the District women's championship, which he is to run for the District Women's Association, would force his withdrawal.

The District women's championship falls in hte week of June 1. Dates of the National Open are June 4, 5 and 6.

Two qualifying places are open at the Ponte Vedra course, where Mackenzie has the golf concessions. His assistant, Claggett Stevens, is handling the pro reins at Ponte Vedra.

The U. S. G. A. recently okayed his requested to qualify at Jacksonville, but Mackenzie's decision to withdraw from the trials means that he is definitely out of the 1936 Open at Baltusrol.

left. Walker flied out, but Bonura walked to fill the bases. Appling drilled a single to rightfield and two more runners scored to draw the score to 4-4.

Those 6 runs by the White Sox in the sixth evolved from only four hits by the nine White Sox who went to bat in the inning. Dykes touched off the uprising with a home-run clout into the left-field seats and Sewell followed with a single. Stratton forced Sewell, but Kreevich singled to right. Haas was safe on Kuhel's muff and, with the bases full and two out, Newsom walked Bonura to force the second run of the inning.

At this point Harris deduced that Newsom was not very effective out there on the hill and waved Henry Coppola to the mound. Appling greeted Coppola with a single that bounced off Kuhel's shins, scoring two runners, and when Kuhel's throw to the plate bounced over Bolton's head, Bonura also scored on the play. Appling, who had gone to second in the meanwhile, scored on Piet's looping single to center.

Sailor Beware's Stretch Rush Wins The Eutaw at Pimlico

Regal Lilly Takes 1st; Black Scout Wins Third Race.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, May 7.—Sailor Beware, a gelded son of St. James and headed for the infirmary before an operation restored his racing form last winter, made a bold stretch rush today that won the Eutaw, feature race of an interesting program. Beaten by a head after setting a brisk pace was Enthusiasm, from the Greentree Stable. It was a Whitney family affair at the end, with John Hay Whitney the winner over Mrs. Payne Whitney. Third in the field of seven came Home Loan, the property of Miss Ethel Hill.

Those who looked for the Bomar Stable's Billy Bee, the 3-5 favorite, found him in fifth place. He ran one of the most disappointing races of the season here, but had a poor ride as an excuse. In his previous race, Billy Bee had won in 1:11 2-5, the fastest 6 furlongs recorded here this spring. Today, he was soundly trounced in 1:12 4-5.

Billy Bee held a contending position, but was allowed to drop in behind horses in the stretch run and failed to find racing room at this important stage.

The chief racing was between Enthusiasm and Sailor Beware from the start. The first named fairly hopped into the lead, with the ultimate winner close by. In the stretch Wise Sister came around to enter contention and Home Loan mowed through on the rail. In a camera finish, Sailor Beware was up in the concluding strides. Enthusiasm, a 24-1 shot, barely lasted to save the place from Home Loan. Wise Sister had dropped out of it in the last eighth.

The usual 8,000 week-day crowd was in attendance and the daily double paid a $37.60 mutuel.

Walter M. Jefford's Regal Lily, a daughter of Man o' War, triumphed in the first race, a maiden affair for juvenile fillies. Ridden by Harry Richards, Regal Lily scored a neck decision over True Tune and for some reason the photo finish was called into play. Care For was third. The race was boiling over with long-shot tips, but they were nowhere in particular.

Caniento Wins Handily.

Caniento, a $5.40 favorite, made every fence a winning one in the day's steeplechase. In charge of Pat McGinnis, the gelding saved ground while setting the pace and jumping well. Little Woman made repeated challenges and threatened to take the purse on the flat after the last jump, but Caniento won by half a lengh. Dangay was a distant third in the field of eight. In the only mishap, Gadabarg lost Jockey Smoot at the second fence.

Hilton Dabson rode Black Scout to victory in the third race to earn a $10.40 mutuel. The gelded son of the Scout, always prominent, came up under a drive in the closing stages to hold Riding High, the pace-setter, safe. Black Toreador closed a lot of ground to be third. The consistent Sunned, a son of Ed Crump and owned by Mrs. B. F. Christmas, of Marlboro, Md., took the fourth race from the favored Cruising. Sir Windsor, which set the pace most of the way, finished third at a $29.90 show mutuel. The winner faultlessly handled by Freddie Faust, of Washington, paid $9.50.

Headin Home Quits.

Jockey Harry Richards won his second race of the day on Kungsholm, a $4.40 favorite in the sixth race. Blessed Again was second and Beveau, third. Kungsholm, much the best, raced along with Headin Home until that one quit, and then went on to win with speed to spare.

Mister Gander, a C. V. Whitney castoff and a fast plater when he breaks, started well today and galloped off with the seventh race, a test of a mile and a sixteenth. Far back for 6 furlongs, the Chickle gelding circled his field to defeat, among others, Abbot's Last and Petee Blue. He paid a $6.40 mutuel. Tiempo, a $3.10 favorite, toyed with her opposition to win the fianale.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—REGAL LILY, $6.10, $4.10, $2.80; TRUE TUNE, $5.40, $4.50; CARE FOR, $5.70.

REGAL LILY, hustled hard in the early running while racing on the inside of TRUE TUNE, was intermittently punished in the last quarter mile, rallied nicely after coming to the outside for the stretch drive and was up in the last 50 yards. TRUE TUNE, going in her best form, had good speed while setting the pace, saved ground and fought it out gamely. CARE FOR went forwardly all the way, but could not enlarge the first two. TONIANNA raced in the first flight but could not better her position. DROWSY suffered early interference and could not threaten. BERGERE lacked speed enough to threaten. SUGABOOT lost ground when forced to race wide. MARY KEEN was held safe. JUB JUB was never a factor. The others were outrun.

SECOND RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Alameda Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:54. Off at 2:56. Winner, H. R. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANIENTO, $5.40, $3.70, $3.20; LITTLE WOMAN, $3.00, $4.00; DANGAY, $7.00.

CANIENTO moved into an easy lead, was strongly reserved for the first mile, rallied nicely when menaced going to the twelfth fence and, responding to a hard drive on the flat after clearing the last jump, outstayed LITTLE WOMAN. Latter followed closest to the winner from the beginning, challenged strongly coming to the twelfth fence and P. McGinnis outrode J. Haley when it came to a drive. DANGAY bettered his position slowly in the last half mile but could not threaten the leaders. ICE MAN raced well for the first mile, then tired. DEPART went well placed but failed to rally when shaken up. MATAGAIN and SNAKE CHARMER were never dangerous.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. The Made at Home. For 3-year-olds and upward (foaled in Maryland.) Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK SCOUT, $10.40, $4.70, $4.30; RIDING HIGH, $5.40; BLACK TOREADOR, $8.90. Daily double paid $37.60.

BLACK SCOUT, going in sharply improved form, was kept close to the pace in the early stages, rallied to punishment when straightened into the homestretch and drew away slowly after wearing the leaders down inside the closing furlong. RIDING HIGH, hustled to maintain a short lead in the early racing, shook off TUGBOAT, but was unable to threaten the winner. BLACK TOREADOR, worked his way up on the outside and came courageously in the closing strides. ADAMS EVE was hard ridden early, moved up stoutly entering the homestretch, but swerved in the last furlong when placed to punishment. JACAMAR closed a good gap while saving ground. TUGBOAT was used up racing with RIDING HIGH and he stopped badly. SAUCY VIXEN could not stay. The others were never serious.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. The Ashburton. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:57. Off at 3:59. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUNNED, $9.50, $3.70, $3.60; CRUISING, $3.50, $3.30; SIR WINDSOR, $29.90.

SUNNED, handling his weight well and rated within striking distance of the leaders, moved up steadily when reaching the homestretch, then closing strong, wore CRUISING down in the last sixteenth. CRUISING followed SIR WINDSOR closely in the early running, took command when straightened into the homestretch, but failed to rally when the winner challenged. SIR WINDSOR displayed nice speed while setting the pace but could not stay when the real test came. SPARKY obtained racing room on the inside and made up some ground in the late stages. ROCKRIM began tiring after the first quarter mile. OUR TIME had no mishaps. PETE M. was never a factor. JOLIE KNIGHT lost ground all the way.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; allowances. The Eutaw. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:26. Off at 4:31½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SAILOR BEWARE, $14.30, $6.80, $5.30; ENTHUSIASM, $17.20, $8.10; HOME LOAN, $6.90.

SAILOR BEWARE, going in his best form, forced a steady pace while following ENTHUSIASM, responded gamely to a hard drive in the closing drive and got up in the closing strides. ENTHUSIASM, showing much improvement, had good speed while setting the pace, saved ground and held on better than usual when the real test came. HOME LOAN secured racing room on the inside and finished determinedly while in close quarters. WISE SISTER was rushed hard all the way and showed good effort. BILLY BEE was permitted to drop back off the pace when bearing the backstretch and finished in behind horses when mildly shaken up during the stretch run. He can do better under more intelligent handling. HIGHPOOL lacked speed and was unable to improve his position. OFFICIAL trailed all the way.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. The Old Dominion. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates, in chute. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:59. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KUNGSHOLM, $4.30, $3.60, $3.10; BLESSED AGAIN, $5.50, $3.70; BEVEAU, $7.60.

KUNGSHOLM, showing good speed from the start, was rated along under stout restraint while forcing the pace for five-eighths, went to the front leisurely and drew out without effort. BLESSED AGAIN was rated well back of the pace while saving ground, moved up on inside leaving backstretch and finished well. BEVEAU jumped into air start, lacked speed for a half mile, but gained slowly on outside in late stages. HEADIN HOME weakened after showing good speed under mild ursing for three-quarters. THE BAILIFF made a mild bid on outside approaching stretch. KINDACORN tired. DROLL STORY was pinched back at first jump.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISTER GANDER, $6.40, $3.90, $3.00; ABBOT'S LAST, $3.90, $2.60; PETTER BLUE, $3.50.

MISTER GANDER, permitted to race on his own courage in the early racing, moved up steadily when put to pressure in the last half mile, wore SASSFRAS down when straightened into the homestretch and held ABBOT'S LAST safe under pressure. ABBOT'S LAST followed in the thick of contention from the beginning and held on well after having much taken out of him early. PETEE BLUE, hard ridden to stay with the leaders while racing on the inside, was pinched back leaving the backstretch, but held on gamely after recovering. SASSFRAS was rushed hard to hold a slight lead, and he had nothing left when put to a hard drive. EGEON went evenly. BUNGALOW was unable to reach contention. PLAYOFF was used up in the first six furlongs. BRAD was placed on the outside for the start and was never a factor.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. The Port Deposit (second division). For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:56. Off at 5:58½. Winner, L. C. Smithson's br. m. (4), Lucky Hour—Daisy Carter. Trained by C. Johnson. Value to winner, $650, second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIEMPO, $3.10, $2.30, $2.10; DONA DULCIN, $2.80, $2.50; MAD EAGLE, $2.90.

TIEMPO, sluggish in gaining her best stride and outrun for the first six furlongs, swung to the outside when placed to punishment in the last five-sixteenths, disposed of the leaders in the last furlong and drew out rapidly. DONA DULCIN, rated off the pace for the first six furlongs, responded to strong pressure and closed with good energy. MAD EAGLE was steadied in front until challenged, but failed to stay when placed to a hard drive. SCOUT ON went forwardly placed, but was not good enough when shaken up.

Try Scoring a Fight At Sarron-Miller Bout

Entrants in The Washington Post boxing contest may get much enjoyment and add to their knowledge of the proper method of scoring by taking a blank to Griffith's Stadium next Monday night and scoring the Freddie Miller-Pete Sarron fight as it progresses.

Those who do this will not only get a chance to test their ability to score a fight as it goes along, but if they don't agree with the official verdict given at the ringside in case the bout goes the distance, they will have a black and white basis for arguing that the official scorers were wrong.

In the meantime, get your entry into The Post boxing contest editor, and take a chance of earning that free trip to the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling heavyweight bout in New York next month.

NAME OF WINNER .....

NAME OF ENTRANT .....

ADDRESS OF ENTRANT .....

The Object.

To predict as closely as possible the official outcome of the Freddie Miller-Pete Sarron featherweight championship boxing bout to be held at Griffith Stadium May 11.

The Prizes.

First prize—One ticket, railroad transportation from Washington and hotel bill in New York for the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling bout to be held in June.

Second prize—One ticket to the Louis-Schmeling fight.

The Rules.

File your entry on the above coupon, or similar blank, showing just how you think the bout will end. If you think it will end in a knockout, mark the coupon thus, showing the round in which you believe it will end, the winner and the time of knockout. In case of a knockout, the entrant callins the winner and round will win. If two or more call the winner and round, the one coming nearest to the time of knockout will win. If two or more are tied on time, the contestant scoring the highest number of points in the rounds preceding the knockout will win.

If the bout goes the distance, the contestant whose total score most nearly approximates the average score struck by the referee and two judges at the Sarron-Miller bout will be declared the winner. In case of a tie, the contestant who has the greatest number of rounds scored correctly will be declared the winner.

All ties that cannot otherwise be broken will be decided on the time of receipt of your entry. All scoring must be done according to the rules and regulations of the District Boxing Commission. The commission rule on scoring reads as follows:

"Scoring shall be by the '5-point' system. The winner of any round is marked 5. The loser of any round is marked from '0.' to '4.9.' When a round is even, each contestant is scored '9.7.'"

Employees of The Post and their relatives are not eligible to enter this contest.

Out Fishin' . . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

Blue fish are in the Chesapeake. A few are being taken by commercial netters. Reports from the vicinity of Cape Charles indicate a large run of all species now under way. Chesapeake Bay fishing should begin around May 15, judging by reports received. On the bay side of Cape Charles large trout and channel bass are being caught daily.

Here in Manteo, N. C., the expected large run of blue fish arrived yesterday. Boats returned with catches from 50 to 60 per boat. A few boats exceeded this number. The blues are running large, bigger than in former seasons, averaging approximately 5 pounds, many weighing 7 and a few larger.

Mullet, used for bait in surf casting, is scarce and must be ordered in advance from commercial netters. Evening surf casting is best.

Bring plenty of tackle with you because prices for same here are excessive in comparison to city prices. The United States Coast Guard has a patrol boat just inside the inlet, turning back all fishing boats attempting to reach the outside during inclement weather. This added precaution no doubt is occasioned by the unfortunate accident last Saturday in which one life was lost.

The rate charged for a day's fishing is usually $15, never less. This price is not too high considering the amount of gasoline and oil consumed in ten hours' trolling and boat upkeep.

It is unfortunate that anglers have to contend with the legalized net fishing in these fine waters inside the inlet. Commercial netters are anchored everywhere awaiting the arrival of large schools of blues, and, upon their arrival, immediately go into action with drift or other type nets which capture thousands of pounds of this game fish.

It seems to the writer that the effort put forth by local interests to build up Manteo as the greatest sport fishing center along the North Atlantic Coast, is going to naught unless the State officials put into effect laws to prohibit netting in the channels inside Oregon Inlet.

Bluefish are selling at 4 cents per pound and shipped to retail markets where they are retailed for approximately seven times this amount. The average angler is paying many times this amount and in addition contributing to all the facilities necessary for sport fishing.

Accommodations are being opened daily for board and room and are now available. For further information phone the writer at Manteo 15 or 17. Weather conditions are excellent.

Whistling Swan Coming Back, Biologist Holds

"More birds have been reported seen in the northern migration this spring than in years," Janzen reports. "I saw over 2,000 on Lake Erie near Monroe. Other observers tell similar stories.

"If the swan is increasing, as it certainly seems to be, the increase may be due largely to Federal and State protection, together with possible improvement in northern nesting conditions. The fact that many hunters have learned to recognize the swans and fewer shott them for snow geese may be another factor."

CCC Improving Refuges for Ducks

Work on Feeder Tracts Is Under Way in 4 Spots.

By the Associated Press.

Civilian Conservation Corps men are hard at work these spring days improving the feeder tracts to the Atlantic flyway and making the refuges more suitable for the ducks and geese that will wing their way south again next fall.

Four great refugees in the Southeast are the Lake Mattamuskeet and Swanquarter areas, on the coast of North Carolina, near Washington, N. C.; the Savannah River area, near Savannah, Ga.; the Cape Romain area, near McClellansville, S. C., and the St. Mark's migratory bird refuge on the Gulf of Mexico, near Tallahassee, Fla.

St. Mark's is a large area bordered by salt water. Aquatic vegetation in its scores of fresh water ponds has long attracted northern waterfowl. The job there is to remove the effects of destructive lumbering operations which have modified the environment until it no longer is attractive to wildlife.

Camp Made Ready.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 7.—The Bloody Angle CCC Camp, located 14 miles from this city in Spottsylvania County, was being made ready today for the first of Virginia State police recruits, whose spring training gets under way there Saturday. Regular school work will begin Monday and continue until June 6.

Anglers Prepare for Attack on Tarpon in Rio Grande 'Rodeo'

By the Associated Press.

Brownsville, Tex., May 7.—The silver king, gamest battler in the Gulf of Mexico, has his fins ruffled for the annual tug-o'-war with the anglers.

Back from a winter's sunning in the tropics of Mexico's coast, the big, leaping tarpon is again in gulf waters. Fisherman, who prize nothing more than his mighty leaps, savage rushes and tricky ways, are ready to do battle again with this "big sardine" of the seas.

The battle against the tarpon is waged collectively and individually, under the rules of Hoyle and those of the moment. Carefully laid plans are in progress now for organized assaults upon the tribe.

Set for Mid-August.

Perhaps the most interesting of these is the Rio Grande Valley tarpon rodeo, held every year at Port Isabel. Here hundreds of anglers from many States tug with the tarpon. Tentatively the rodeo has been set for the middle of August, with a possibility it may be changed to early September, according to Dr. J. A. Hockaday, general chairman.

Last year in another rodeo the tarpon and the elements teamed to whip down the collective ears of the anglers, who tossed, reeled, and perspired in vain. The Port Isabel assault is carried out on a more extensive scale. Boats are used for that event, while in the other affair, anglers cast from the shore at the mouth of the Rio Grande.

River anglers use ordinary casting rods, a short steel leader, and a big tarpon hook. Mullet is strung on the hook, tossed into the river, and the angler walks downstream while the current carries his bait along.

Tarpon strike the mullet—and the show is on.

Trolling Is Orthodox.

Anglers leave Port Isabel before daybreak. At sunrise they are anchored at a favored spot. They sit comfortably in the boat while out behind it trails the lure.

Mullet and artificial lures are used. Most anglers use regulation light tackle, since they get twice as many points for a tarpon catch on light tackle. Specifications are a six-ounce rod tip, a nine-thread, or 24-pound test line.

Keystone Sells Licenses.

The Conservation Department of the State of Maryland has designated the Keystone Automobile Club an official agency for the sale of Maryland fishing licenses, it was announced today.

France Loses $77,544,000 Gold in Week

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 7.—The heavy flow of gold abroad when the Leftist victory in the Chamber of Deputies became apparent was shown today in a Bank of France statement that gold valued at 1,169,000,000 francs ($77,544,000) had been withdrawn in the week ended May 1.

The gold reserves of the bank had been reduced at that time to 60,768,428,000 francs ($4,031,013,000) with approximately 1,000,000,000 francs more reported withdrawn in the past week. Financial authorities said the drain on gold had diminished since yesterday because of the raise in the discount rate from 5 to 6 per cent.

The steady withdrawals have taken 4,939,000,000 frans ($325,171,412) in gold out of the vaults in the last six weeks. (The franc is currently valued at 6.58375 cents).

The bank note circulation in the week ended May increased 1,581,000,000 francs to 84,138,000,000 francs, cutting the gold coverage on the bank's obligations to 64.85 per cent from 66.47 per cent.

Commercial discounts in France meanwhile have risen to 14,685,000,000 francs from 9,088,000,000 francs on March 6 indicating the bank is meeting the national treasury need for funds, according to financiers, who said the discounts were out of proportion to business needs.

This will be the twenty-seventh distribution that has been made since liquidation began June 1, 1933, adn will bring the total to 49 per cent of the fund administered by the Railroad Credit Corporation, or $36,058,154.

Rail Defaults Climb to Total Of 2½ Billions

90 Companies Operating 73,000 Miles Are in Receivership.

New York, May 7.—In analyzing the Stedman plan for reorganization of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, the Standard Statistics Co. says today that a forthright scaling down of funded debt and fixed charges, as is planned for the Missouri Pacific, seems to be the only permanent solution for most of the current railroad reorganization problems. It must be remembered that many carriers have ben capitalized on a basis of prosperity conditions, and without regard to permanent losses of business caused by shifting economic currents. Shortages in financial structures have been brought to light under the test of depression conditions and these must be corrected if ever the roads are to reattain a sound footing.

The cumulative effects on the railroads of several years of subnormal business are seen in the greatly increased number of bankruptcies. At this time, close to 73,000 miles of road (approximately 29 per cent of the total) are owned or operated by the 90 companies, large and small, that are in receivership or under the direction of bankruptcy trustees. Roundly $2,500,000,000 face value of railroad obligations is in default as to interest or principal or both.

For mileage under court jurisdiction, the present total represents a new high record. By comparison, it may be noted that in the railroad crisis of 1894 upward of 40,800 miles were being administered by receivers. Roads in receivership at that time included the "Santa Fe," Norfolk & Western and Union Pacific, now three of the strongest in the country. The outstanding record of these carriers illustrates the progress which may be made following any soundly conceived reorganization which brings fixed charges in line with earning capacity and permits the upbuilding of properties.

256,251 Stockholders In Associated Gas

New York, May 7.—Registered security holders of the Associated Gas and Electric System totaled 256,251 on January 1, 1936, a gain of 1,286 during 1935.

Almost half, or 125,660, of these Associated security holders are customers. This is 7,334 more than the number of customers who owned registered securities on January 1, 1935. There are 10,499 institutions and individual fiduciaries listed as holders.

Standard Power Output.

Chicago, May 7.—Electric output of Standard Gas and Electric Co. for the week ended May 2, 1936, totaled 91,760,748 kilowatt-hours, an increase of 11.3 per cent compared with the corresponding week last year.

Stocks Find Recovery Road Blocked and Retreat Under Selling; Bond Advance Halts.

New York, May 7.—In striking contrast to yesterday's market, when progress of stocks was slow but continuous, prices today were weak from the start. No rallying attempt was seen at any time until the usual clearance purchases and sales were made shortly before the close. Activity rose a little from time to time, especially in the last hour, when prices were their poorest, with many of the leaders bending 1 to 3 points. Some speculative stocks fell as much as 7 points. Bonds ended their advance.

To many observers the stock market acted as though it had run out of power on its rebound from the recent decline. Those who predict prices on average performance of prices had expected that the recovery would wear itself out this week, but another explanation was supplied for the poor action. Revelation of a huge gold loss by the Bank of France and the press reports of flighty conditions in the Paris capital markets increased fears here that the franc would go by the board. Our stock market, rightly or wrongly, has come to regard it as axiomatic that prices should go down when the last stronghold of sound money is being battered. Turnover was around 1,000,000 shares.

Heavy Gold Loss.

The loss of nearly 1,200,000,000 francs reported for the week ending last Friday was a momentary shock to the exchange market, where it was realized that since the statement date more than 1,000,000,000 francs additional had been taken out of the French central bank's reserves. This makes an aggregate loss of gold to date on this movement of about 6,000,000,000 francs, or almost $400,000,000.

Virtually all foreign cash balances, especially American, are said to have been removed from France, but there is still much fleeing capital which takes fright at the utterances of French politicians intended to be reassuring. For instance, the Communists in Paris in yesterday's manifesto declared their intention to defend the franc and in the next paragraph came out for a heavy levy upon capital.

Thin Markets.

Around 1 p. m., just after the guilder, exceptionally weak all day, had enjoyed a sharp partial recovery, the French franc suddenly became strong and jumped above the gold point. The action of both currencies indicated how thin the market for exchange was. It was reported that one of the banks had supplied some francs to a Standard Oil company but that, when it went in to buy a portion of the francs it had sold, it had to raise its bid steeply to get them.

As testimony before the Senate committee on the new tax bill comes before the public the essential unsoundness, if not viciousness of the undistributed profits proposals, becomes more apparent even to the layman. It would be small wonder if the stock market took the matter seriously enough to play dead until sure that no such measure would pass, for it clearly would work havoc with a great many companies, to say nothing of hampering rather than aiding the balancing of the budget.

Confusion and Worse.

The most telling blows against the tax were delivered yesterday by the country's leading authority on taxation matters, in exposing the rather open-faced misleading statement of the day before made by the Secretary of the Treasury, who tried to impress the Senators with the erroneous idea that some four and a half billions of corporate earnings would escape taxation unless the new bill were passed. Mr. May pointed out the uncomfortable fact that the Treasury experts already had told the Senate committee something entirely different; which the head of the Treasury Department now tactily admits.

The question often has been asked in Wall Street why, if the administration's startling tax measure were such a good thing, the Secretary of the Treasury did not explain it and come to its defense. He had held off a long time, and probably the friends of the measure would be just as happy had he managed to prolong his vacation. All that naturally deepens the suspicion that the whole business is neither budget balancing, revenue raising, nor taxation, but simply another means of striking at people who have money, merely because the have it (since that seems to please the Brain Trusters and New Dealers), and a means of hastening the day when all industry must borrow crutches from the Government.

Imagination.

Presumably the stock market has been worrying lest the abandonment of the gold standard in France, Holland and Switzerland would lead to withdrawal of foreign funds from this market. That could happen if revaluation on gold were promptly accomplished. However, the markets are showing a seeming inconsistency in sinking in response to the outflow of gold from Paris, much of which is coming here. It may be argued that the markets here fear further dollar devaluation once the franc goes; but no logical reason for such expectation exists. If dollars are to be butchered again no such excuse is needed. Moreover, the immediate effect undoubtedly would be a wild rush to turn money into stocks and other property.

Other Corners.

Puny little corners that the market occasionally sees nowadays merely serve to keep memories green of a real achievement in that line. News today that Wheeling & Lake Erie prior lien stock might be retired calls to mind the exciting corner that existed for a while in that stock when the Van Sweringen, New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio interests were interested in keeping the road from control of the Pennsylvania-Taplin crowd, in 1927. The stock exchange did nothing about that corner, although a year or so before it had summarily thrown off the list the Piggly Wiggly stock because a rank outsider from the Tennessee hills had beaten some of the local smart boys at their own game of cornering stocks and was turning the screws on them in fine style. It couldn't very well put the heat on the interests involved in the Wheeling affair, any more than it could have done something, had it at that time considered corners injurious, to ease the situation in the great Northern Pacific corner.

Shorts Trapped.

The Northern Pacific episode occurred on May 9, 1901. Fight for control of the railroad between the Morgan-Hill interests on the one side and the Harriman-Kuhn Loeb forces on the other brought a series of sharp advances in the stock that sent the price to 1,000, as shorts frantically tried to get out of the stock. The Northern Pacific affair was not purely a stock manipulation scheme designed to trap shorts; it was a genuine fight for control of the road, and the shorts were burned because they had touched some live wires in ignorance of the heavy voltage carried.

Wide Swings.

So violent was the disturbance on the floor of the stock exchange, when it was learned that shorts could not borrow Northern Pacific stock and that many brokers were in danger of failing, that a heavy selling movement got under way in all markets. At their worst leading stocks were down 10 to 30 points. Some recovery was had before the close, but losses of 5 to 20 points were general. Northern Pacific subsided to close at 325, a rise of 165 points on the day. Steel sold at just half its bset price of the day when it touched 24, but it closed with only a 5-point loss. Amalgamated Copper, a trading favorite of the time, tumbled 26 points, but closed with no worse than a 10-point loss. General Electric recovered half of its 20 points loss. The total turnover of 3,300,000 shares set a record that was not broken until the bull markets of the Coolidge era. Steel reported 321,700 sales. Union Pacific was 330,900 and Santa Fe was 231,500 shares. No record is available of how the stock ticker performed on that day. At that time stocks and bonds were handled on one ticker.

Gold, Circulation Gain During Week

The daily average volume of Federal Reserve bank credit outstanding during the week ended May 6, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks yesterday, was $2,477,000,000, an increase of $4,000,000 compared with the preceding week and of $6,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1935.

On May 6 total Reserve bank credit amounted to $2,478,000,000, an increase of $6,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with increases of $53,000,000 in money in circulation and $26,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and a decrease of $4,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency, offset in part by an increase of $27,000,000 in monetary gold stock to $10,248,000,000, and decreases of $33,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks and $17,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts. Member bank reserve balances on May 6 were estimated to be approximately $2,700,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

Relatively small changes were reported in holdings of discounted and purchased bills and industrial advances. An increase of $5,000,000 in holdings of United States Treasury bills was offset by a decrease of $5,000,000 in holdings of Treasury notes.

Steel Workers Seek 15% Wage Increase

Canonsburg, Pa., May 7 (AP).—The convention of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers called for a 15 per cent wage increase in a resolution adopted today. The increase would be made effective in any new contracts entered by the organizatoin with mills this year.

At the same time campaign lines were drawn for a showdown in the fight between industrial unionism and old-line craft unions striving for control of the association.

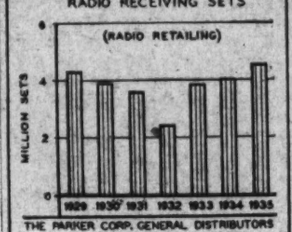
Radio Sales a Record With Sharp Price Cut



Boston, Mass., May 7.—More radio receiving sets were sold last year than in any previous year. The total sales price of these sets, however, was less than half the sales total in 1929. In 1929 the average retail price was about $133 a set, while in 1935 the average sales price dropped to about $50.

Wheat Declines; Demand Curtailed

Chicago, May 7.—Cheap offerings of hard winter wheat to be shipped from Missouri River points to Chicago did much today to pull down wheat prices here.

Another unsettling factor was curtailment of European demand for Canadian wheat, notwithstanding Winnipeg quotations were at nearly the season's bottommost level.

After a fall of around a cent a bushel, wheat closed unstable, ¼ to ¾ under yesterday finish, May 95⅞ to 9⅝, July 87½ to 87⅝, corn ⅛ to ⅜ advanced, May 63½, oats unchanged to ¼ up, and provisions unchaned to a setback of 22 cents.

Cotton Belt Bonds Not Due, Court Holds

St. Louis, May 7 (AP).—A injunction preventing the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, trustee under a $21,638,000 bond issue of the St. Louis Southerwestern (Cotton Belt) Railroad, from declaring the issue due because of default in interest, was issued today by United States District Judge Charles B. Davis.

Officials of the railroad said had the trust company been allowed to declare the issue due now instead of at maturity in 1952, a provision in the mortgage permitting bondholders to demand payment in Dutch guilders at the current rate of interest would have required the railroad to pay $36,637,000, or about 70 per cent more than the face amount of the issue.

In issuing the injunction, Judge Davis held acceleration of maturity of the bonds would delay and in effect prevent consummation of a plan of reorganization for the railroad under the amended bankruptcy act.

Burlington Expands Passenger Traffic

Chicago, May 7 (AP).—The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad's efforts to recapture passenger business resulted in increases of 12.9 per cent in the number of passengers carried and 3.4 per cent in passenger revenue during 1935, Ralph Budd, president, told stockholders in his annual report today.

Low fares, streamlined speed trains and other service improvements, combined with better economic conditions, were responsible for the gains, Budd intimated. This was the second time passenger revenue has gained over a previous year since 1923.

3% Debentures to Retire 5% Preferred Stock of Subsidiary.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 7.—Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey announced today it was filing with the Securities and Exchange Commissoin an application covering an issue of $85,000,000 2-year 3 per cent debentures to provide funds for the retirement of the outstanding 5 per cent guaranteed preferred stock of Standard Oil Export Co., a subsidiary.

It is proposed, the company announced, to call the Export company's preferred stock for redemption on next July 30 at $110 a share. This will require $84,142,850.

stock, against $45,618,960, or $1.76 a

Standard Oil Export Corporation controls and directs the export activities of the parent company and several of its subsidiaries. The principal asset of the export unit is its ownership of all of the ordinary shares of Anglo-American Oil Co., Ltd.

Tidewater Contest.

Attempts of the J. Paul Getty interests of California to secure a greater hand in the affairs of Tidewater Associated Oil met defeat today. Before the vote was officially tabulated at the annual meeting it was understood that nearly 4,000,000 shares had been voted in favor of the management, headed by William F. Humphrey, president, compared with about 1,000,000 for the Getty group and others supporting them.

J. Paul Getty, during a recess in which proxies were being counted said that his group controlled 14 per cent of the company's stock.

"We are not interested in controlling Tide Water Associated," he said. "All we're interested in is the stockholders and a chance to make some money," Getty declared.

The Getty interests also desired amendment of the by-laws to provide that the stockholders, by a majority of a quorum, would have the power to amend the company's by-laws. The present by-laws, they said, deprive a majority of the stockholders at meetings the right to express their wishes.

Ohio Oil Lifts Rate.

Directors of Ohio Oil Co. declared a dividend of 25 cents on the common stock, which compares with payments of 15 cents in June and December last year. The dividend is payable June 15 to stock of record May 18. A regular quarterly disbursement of $1.50 on the preferred stock also was announced, payable June 15 to stock of record June 3.

Canadian Pacific Plans $65,000,000 New Stock

Montreal, May 7 (AP).—Shareholders of Canadian Pacific Railway approved a resolution today authorizing issuance of 65,000,000 of new capital stock of a par value of $25 a share. The stock is to be issued at "such times as the directors might determine."

Poland Takes Step To Curtail Imports

Warsaw, Poland, May 7 (AP).—Poland today announced a sweeping move to curtail imports as the next step in its campaign to protect the zloty, already under rigid export restrictions.

Official statements indicated importation in the future will be on a large license plan similar to that in effect in Germany, with a special control commission supervising the scheme.

Thomson Gets A 69 in Drill For Open

Washington Golf Club Pro Breaks Par Over His Home Course.

Davey Thomson, Washington Golf and Country Club's tiny Scottish professional, tuning up for the National Open sectional qualifying trials scheduled next Monday at Hillendale's course near Baltimore, shot a 69, one under par, over his home course yesterday.

Playing with Leo Walper, Bethesda driving range instructor, also a participant in the Open trials; V. Calvert Dickey and Frank Williams, Thomson burned up the first nine in 32 and returned in 39, with three-putt greens on the thirteenth and fifteenth.

Approximately 100 golfers have entered the Chevy Chase invitation tournament which opens next Wednesday. All of Washington's better known players, including Defending Champion Hickman Greene, are entered. Bill Waxter, of Baltimore, president of the Maryland State Golf Association, and Don Weems, prominent Winchester golfer, are among the entrants.

Pairings and starting times will be announced Sunday morning, and practice rounds will be held Monday and Tuesday.

In a play-off of their match which was halted by a snow back in March, Ralph Fowler defeated Harold Wiley, 2 and 1 yesterday to win the winter match play tournament at Washington Golf and Country Club.

Wiffy Cox, Kenwood professional, shot a 70 playing with Freddie Miller, world's featherweight champion; Pete Reilly, Miller's manager, and Shirley Povich, The Post's sports editor, yesterday at Kenwood. Miller scored an 85. Playing nine additional holes, Cox carded a 36, and Miller, a 41. Cox was loud in his praise of Miller's swing, considering he is a southpaw. Although he didn't score well, Reilly didn't three-putt a green.

Mt. Rainier 6-Run Rally Subdues Devitt by 9-2

A six-run rally in the sixth inning gave Mount Rainier High a victory over Devitt Prep in a baseball game played on the Mount's field yesterday, 9 to 2. Steve Miller, working his first game of the season, kept hits well scattered and in the big inning tripled with the bases loaded.

Derringer Reinstated By Cincinnati Reds

Cincinnati, May 7 (AP).—Paul Derringer won reinstatement to active duty with the Cincinnati Reds today.

General Manager Larry C. MacPhail said Derringer, who was suspended Sunday by Manager Chuck Dressen for "failure to slide into home plate" with what might have been the winning run in a game with the Giants, would accompany the Reds when they leave for Pittsburgh tonight.

During the suspension, the Reds officials sounded out other clubs on a proposition to trade Derringer, but received no acceptable offers.

State Checks Gasoline Bills By Ex-Official

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 7.—The State survey commission examined today bills for 6,500 gallons of gasoline delivered to the Frederick County farm of E. Austin Baughman, former State commissioner of motor vehicles.

The bills totaled $1,312.47 from June 1, 1927, to August 18, 1932, and were paid with State funds. The bills were identified by Owen McGeeney, auditor for the motor vehicle department.

McGeeney identified 24 bills for gasoline averaging 300 gallons each, usually at semimonthly intervals. Most of the bills carried the notation, "Delivered at Poplar Terrace Dairy," owned by Baughman. All were approved by Dr. Marshall Schroeder, deputy commissioner of motor vehicles.

The commission also had McGeeney identify from records payments made to Baughman for which its investigators have been unable to find vouchers. These included an item of $2,149.34 in April, 1936, charged as a deficit; three items for traveling expenses in that same month, totaling $2,994.85, and a number of other expenditures for railway accommodations.

One item was $204.50 for expenses at a four-day conference of motor vehicles commissioners in Boston in 1927.

Baughman, in response to an invitation, has said he would appear before the commission.

PREVENTABLE SQUEEZE PLAY.

It is no exaggeration to say that fully 50 per cent of the coups successfully executed could have been forestalled by timely counter measures.

Obviously, before danger can be averted it must first be recognized. It is infinitely easier to take precautions against attack when one can see in what form and from what direction the attack is coming. For that reason it is wise for players to familiarze themselves with the typica positoins from which the various end plays are developed. In today's hand a double squeeze for a small slam contract could have been scotched by the use of elementary arithmetic.

‡Repeated asking bid; South knows North must hold diamond ace, since he himself holds two aces. Now he asks for second round control.

West's opening lead of the spade queen created an immediate problem for the declarer. He fully recognized the danger of the queen being singleton, but, as against this, a count of tricks disclosed that only 11 could be made by straight play. A squeeze was the only chance and that necessitated passing the first lead. In fear and trembling, declarer played low from the dummy.

East was fast asleep. It should have been child's play to overtake the queen with the king and continue the suit on the theory that if West, instead of the declarer, had the jack, nothing could be lost, whereas if the queen were a singleton an immediate ruff by West would defeat the contract.

When East stolidly let the queen hold the trick, West shifted to the five of clubs and declarer won, after which he rattled off five trump tricks.

The six of trumps now began the double squeeze. West had to discard a club to guard diamond. East let go a diamond. The jack of spades to the ace reduced West to one club, after which the cashing of the ace and king of diamonds left East in the impossible position of having to guard both dummy's spade and declarer's clubs. The vulnerable slam became a lay-down simply because East, on the first trck, could not count up to 13.
